that the acquisition of a first language involves considerably more than the mere learning of grammatical structure This view of learning had led researchers gradually to see children as more than grammarians devising grammatical constructs The tendency at the time was to see the child as an active partner in what are essentially games of communication and invention during which the rules of usage as well as the rules of grammar are discovered This study is based on extensive and detailed observation of the verbal interaction of two pre school children and as such offers far reaching ideas and conclusions concerning the manner in which all children determine the role of language in their lives whilst simultaneously learning how to piece it together The Hiding Game Rosemary Reulle Irons,2002 Several friends decide to play hide and seek
