Witnessing Beyond Recognition:

Witnessing Kelly Oliver, 2001-01-01 Challenging the fundamental tenet of the multicultural movement that social struggles turning upon race gender and sexuality are struggles for recognition this work offers a powerful critique of current conceptions of identity and subjectivity based on Hegelian notions of recognition The author s critical engagement with major texts of contemporary philosophy prepares the way for a highly original conception of ethics based on witnessing Central to this project is Oliver s contention that the demand for recognition is a symptom of the pathology of oppression that perpetuates subject object and same different hierarchies While theorists across the disciplines of the humanities and social sciences focus their research on multiculturalism around the struggle for recognition Oliver argues that the actual texts and survivors accounts from the aftermath of the Holocaust and slavery are testimonials to a pathos that is beyond recognition Oliver traces many of the problems with the recognition model of subjective identity to a particular notion of vision presupposed in theories of recognition and misrecognition Contesting the idea of an objectifying gaze she reformulates vision as a loving look that facilitates connection rather than necessitates alienation As an alternative Oliver develops a theory of witnessing subjectivity She suggests that the notion of witnessing with its double meaning as either eyewitness or bearing witness to the unseen is more promising than recognition for describing the onset and sustenance of subjectivity Subjectivity is born out of and sustained by the process of witnessing the possibility of address and response which puts ethical obligations at its heart

Surveying the Literary Landscapes of Terry Tempest Williams Katherine

R. Chandler, Melissa A. Goldthwaite, 2003 The first book of criticism to address the work of one of the West's finest daughters
Collective Trauma, the Body, and Literary Forms of Witnessing Kimberly Adelle Rostan, 2007 Standing Before the Law Sarah Kathryn Burgess, 2007 Explaining the Depiction of Violence Against Women in Victorian Literature Karen F. Tatum, 2005 This book examines the causes of the abject response in canonical novels such as Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist, Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre and Mary Elizabeth Braddon's Aurora Floyd and Lady Audley's Secret In Powers of Horror. Julia Kristeva outlines her theory of abjection as a simultaneous fascination and horror stemming from sensorial reminders of the subject's primal psychological relation to the mother. The author suggests that these psychological perspectives can potentially result in acts of physical violence which are called abject response. By developing Julia Kristeva's theory of abjection as a model for reading physical acts of violence against women, the book yields specific answers to its overriding questions: why was a female body so threatening in nineteenth-century fiction? The answer lies in social constructions of women as powers of horror which the male subject imbibes and which lead to domestic violence if improperly balanced.

Stories Through Theories/theories Through Stories Gordon Henry, 2009 Stories Through Theories. Theories Through Stories explores the uneasy relations, often contentious, sometimes complicit, between American Indian Literature and literary theory. This collection of essays, sometimes playfully but always insistently, changes our readings of Native works and challenges our roles as intellectual guides until we step deeper into the ambiguous territories where writer, listener, reader, and critic intersect. Taken together, these essays provide compelling evidence for looking at primary Native cultures, authors, and histories as enrichments of Native literature.

Representing the Catastrophic Aaron Kerner, 2007 The study analyzes the way in which cultures represent and make sense of catastrophic events through the medium of the visual arts. This work should appeal to scholars interested in art history, film studies, cultural studies, and psychoanalysis to disavow the event by referring to it as unimaginable or otherwise such events are assigned to the domain of fiction or fantasy. For example, in response to 9/11 and the images of the planes flying into buildings, many responded, "it was like I was watching a movie." How, then, when our knee-jerk response is to assign catastrophic events to the incomprehensible or the domain of utter fantasy, do we convey the reality of these events? What rhetorical strategies are at our disposal when we no longer have an immediate relationship to them? When the last survivors of these catastrophic events are gone, how will we relate to representations of these events? What rhetorical strategies will prove most useful in conveying the historical significance of these events even when the physical traces are gone? This book addresses these questions.

Against War Nelson Maldonado-Torres,2008-04-09 An analysis of Western attitudes toward war from a subaltern perspective that brings new insights into Western philosophical paradigms Alive and Kicking at All Ages Ulla Kriebnerneegg,Roberta Maierhofer,Barbara Ratzenböck,2014 The linking of age and ill health is part of a cultural narrative of decline as age is often defined as the absence of good health Research has shown that we are aged by culture but we are also culturally made ill when we age The cultural ambiguity of aging can thus deconstruct negative images of old age as physical decrepitude This volume investigates the topic of health within the matrix of time and experience by addressing issues such as how our understanding of health influences our notion of agency within a subversive deconstruction of normative age concepts and what role the notion of health plays in such an interaction SPEAKING OUT Linde Zingaro,2009-08-15 Linde Zingaro a lifelong social service worker and activist interviewed many colleagues who chose to speak out and the consequences that befell them for doing so She relays their stories here as well as her own and uses these experience to create a blueprint to help other workers activists and community researchers to speak freely in the interests of a more just society Julia Kristeva's Ethical and Political Thought Sara Beardsworth,Mary Beth Mader,2004 Differences ,2007
