

The use of language in such domains by the modern state is a matter for the ruling elite to decide; in the case of English, for instance, it was standardized not because it was structurally any better than the non-standardized varieties of language. It was standardized by complex processes in which powerful elites, clerks of the chancery, and the clergy had a hand as John Homey. Then the educated classes, state bureaucracies, clergymen, publishers and writers spent money on teaching it, printing books and dictionaries and using it in the domains of power.

The non-standard varieties of language or languages are generally given less prestige than standardized ones even by their speakers. This is not because of the nature of language but because of its use in the domains of power.

The crucial factor is power politics not language.

The Language of politics:

- The language of politicians are mainly based upon:
Presupposition: the meaning of the word 'presuppose' is to 'assume before hand involve; imply -represent some of the most powerful of language patterns. Presupposition may be 'fair and uncontroversial' based upon knowledge which is common to all parties privy to a communication, or 'unfair and controversial'-made upon the basis of covert knowledge by a communicator with a hidden agenda.

Implicative: It is a technical term in the pragmatic subfield of linguistics, coined by H.P Grice, which refers to what is suggested in an utterance, even though neither expressed nor strictly implied the utterance.

- Paul Grice : identified four types of general conversational implicative :
- Maxim of Manner: Avoid ambiguity, be brief, be orderly.
- Maxim of Relation: relevance is relevant.
- Maxim of Quantity Information: Make your contribution as informative as is required for the purposes of the exchange.
- Do not make your contribution more informative than required.
- Maxim of Quality : Truth
Do not say what you believe to be false.

Metaphors:

It is a figure of speech comparing two unlike things.

Euphemism: It is an inoffensive expression that is substituted for one that is considered offensive. In other words, the communication of painful or hurtful concepts using softer words is known as euphemism.

Rule of Three: It is a powerful speech writing technique. For example, Abraham Lincoln's "Government of the people, by the people, for the people."

Parallelism: It is when elements of a sentence "have the same weight and are often the same part of speech Noun. It's all about equality
