

WORLDBUILDING 101:

Cultures II

@fueledbyfiction

Here is the promised second part for creating fantasy cultures! I hope you enjoy it:

- religion: do your different cultures differ in religion? Do they believe in completely different things? Are people in one culture mostly religious while most people in the other culture are atheists? Do they follow the same religion, but one of them follows it stricter than the other? Does this lead to some kind of conflict between them?
- what is your culture's believe regarding war and peace? E.g. do they think people who are trying to protect the peace are just doing so because they are too weak to win a war, meaning peace is a sign of weakness and cowardice? Do they think peace is a valuable resource that only the wisest people can preserve for their people? Do they think war and destruction is their divine right, because they are supposed to be the species that rules the world with an iron fist?
- crimes: what crimes are seen as worse than others? Is there a reason for this? How are crimes punished by the public? (e.g. are they hunted down, or are they "just" shamed?)
- how does your culture treat their children, their poor, their elders? Do they have some kind of welfare system set up for them if they are in any problem?
- what are the beauty standards in your culture? Do they differ greatly from others? What is the reason for these beauty standards? How are people treated that do not fit these beauty standards?

I hope these ideas helped you come up with ideas to consider for your fantasy culture! Follow me for more writing advice!
