

Understanding Cholesterol

How cholesterol travels

High-density lipoprotein (HDL) carries cholesterol away from arteries back to the liver. HDL is often called "good cholesterol" because it helps reduce the risk of heart disease. The more HDL you have, the lower your risk of heart disease.

Low-density lipoprotein (LDL) carries cholesterol from the liver to the rest of the body. LDL is often called "bad cholesterol" because it can build up in the arteries, leading to heart disease. The more LDL you have, the higher your risk of heart disease.

Very low-density lipoprotein (VLDL) carries triglycerides from the liver to the rest of the body. VLDL is often called "bad cholesterol" because it can build up in the arteries, leading to heart disease. The more VLDL you have, the higher your risk of heart disease.

What is cholesterol?

Cholesterol is a waxy, fat-like substance that is found in all animal cells. It is essential for the production of cell membranes, hormones, and vitamins. It is also a major component of bile, which is used to digest fats.

LDL (Low-density lipoprotein) is often called "bad cholesterol" because it can build up in the arteries, leading to heart disease. The more LDL you have, the higher your risk of heart disease.

HDL (High-density lipoprotein) is often called "good cholesterol" because it helps remove LDL from the arteries and carries it back to the liver for disposal. The more HDL you have, the lower your risk of heart disease.

What does "high cholesterol" mean?

High cholesterol is a condition in which the level of cholesterol in the blood is higher than normal. This can lead to the buildup of plaque in the arteries, which can increase the risk of heart disease and stroke.

LDL cholesterol: High-density lipoprotein (LDL) is often called "bad cholesterol" because it can build up in the arteries, leading to heart disease. The more LDL you have, the higher your risk of heart disease.

HDL cholesterol: High-density lipoprotein (HDL) is often called "good cholesterol" because it helps remove LDL from the arteries and carries it back to the liver for disposal. The more HDL you have, the lower your risk of heart disease.

- Normal total cholesterol < 200
- Elevated total cholesterol > 240

Chylomicron

Exogenous pathway

The exogenous pathway starts in the small intestine, where dietary fats are absorbed and packaged into chylomicrons. These travel through the lymphatic system to the liver, where they are broken down into chylomicron remnants. These remnants are then taken up by the liver and processed.

Cholesterol limits

Cholesterol levels in the blood should be kept within certain limits to reduce the risk of heart disease. The following table shows the recommended ranges for total cholesterol, LDL cholesterol, and HDL cholesterol.

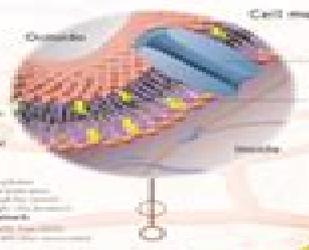

Category	LDL Cholesterol (mg/dL)	HDL Cholesterol (mg/dL)	Total Cholesterol (mg/dL)
Optimal	< 100	> 60	< 200
Near optimal	100-129	50-59	200-239
Borderline high	130-159	40-49	240-269
High	≥ 160	≤ 35	≥ 270

Causes and treatment of high cholesterol

Causes: High cholesterol can be caused by a diet high in saturated fats and cholesterol, a lack of exercise, and certain medical conditions such as diabetes and kidney disease.

Treatment: High cholesterol can be treated with lifestyle changes, such as a healthy diet and regular exercise, and with medications called statins.

Prevention: To prevent high cholesterol, it is important to eat a diet low in saturated fats and cholesterol, exercise regularly, and avoid smoking.

Endogenous pathway

The endogenous pathway starts in the liver, where cholesterol is synthesized and packaged into very low-density lipoprotein (VLDL). VLDL travels through the lymphatic system to the liver, where it is broken down into intermediate-density lipoprotein (IDL) and low-density lipoprotein (LDL). LDL then travels through the bloodstream to the rest of the body.

Return path for approximately 50% of LDL

What is a lipoprotein?

Lipoproteins are particles that transport lipids through the bloodstream. They are made up of a core of hydrophobic lipids surrounded by a monolayer of hydrophilic lipids. The different types of lipoproteins are chylomicrons, VLDL, IDL, LDL, and HDL.

Normal Artery Artery with plaque

What is atherosclerosis?

Atherosclerosis is a condition in which plaque builds up in the arteries, leading to a narrowing of the artery and an increase in the risk of heart disease and stroke.

- Progression of plaque development
- Oxidized low-density lipoproteins initiate endothelial cell injury
 - Cells migrate consisting of foam cell macrophages and lymphocytes appear
 - Layers of macrophages and smooth muscle are present
 - Layers of fibrous plaque develop over accumulated foam and cells, protruding into the artery
