What is cerebrospinal fluid?

Cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) is a clear, colorless liquid that surrounds the brain and spinal cord. It is produced in the choroid plexus of the ventricles of the brain and circulates through the ventricular system and the subarachnoid space. CSF provides mechanical protection for the brain and spinal cord, cushions them against trauma, and carries nutrients and waste products.

What is the central nervous system?

The central nervous system (CNS) consists of the brain and spinal cord. It is responsible for processing and coordinating sensory and motor information. The brain is divided into the cerebrum, cerebellum, and brainstem. The spinal cord is a long, thin, tube-like structure that runs from the base of the brain down to the lower back. It contains the cell bodies of neurons and is responsible for transmitting signals between the brain and the rest of the body.

The spinal cord is divided into cervical, thoracic, lumbar, and sacral regions. It is surrounded by meninges and cerebrospinal fluid.

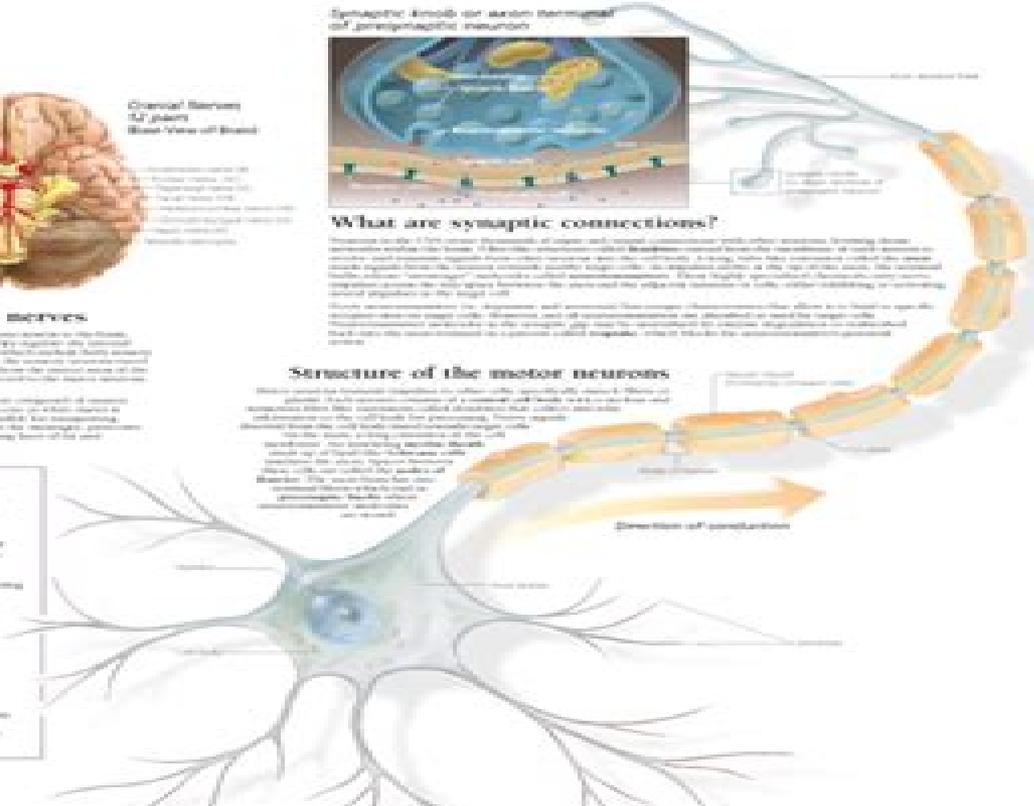

Synaptic knob or axon terminal of presynaptic neuron

What are synaptic connections?

Synaptic connections are the points where neurons meet and communicate. They are formed by the presynaptic terminal of one neuron and the postsynaptic terminal of another neuron. The presynaptic terminal contains synaptic vesicles that release neurotransmitters into the synaptic cleft. These neurotransmitters bind to receptors on the postsynaptic terminal, triggering an action potential that travels down the axon.
