

UNDERSTANDING LEUKEMIA

What Is Leukemia?

Leukemia is a group of cancers that starts in the bone marrow and produces too many abnormal white blood cells in the body. The abnormal white blood cells can interfere with the production of other types of blood cells. Leukemia can be found in the blood and in the bone marrow. It usually starts in the bone marrow and can spread to other parts of the body.

Blood Cell Development

Blood cells are produced in the bone marrow, a spongy tissue inside the bones. The process of blood cell formation is called hematopoiesis. It starts with a common stem cell called a hematopoietic stem cell. This cell can divide to produce all types of blood cells. As the stem cell divides, it produces more stem cells and also produces the different types of blood cells that are needed for the body to function.

What Is the Function of Blood?

Blood is a complex fluid that carries oxygen and nutrients to the body's cells and carries away carbon dioxide and other waste products. It also plays a role in the body's immune system and in the regulation of body temperature. Blood is made up of red blood cells, white blood cells, and platelets, all suspended in a liquid called plasma.

What Are the Causes and the Risk Factors?

The exact cause of leukemia is still unknown, but several factors are thought to contribute to its development:

- Genetic mutations: Changes in the DNA sequence of a cell can lead to the production of abnormal white blood cells.
- Environmental factors: Exposure to certain chemicals, such as benzene, and radiation can increase the risk of leukemia.
- Age: The risk of leukemia increases with age, particularly for acute myeloid leukemia (AML).
- Family history: Some people have a higher risk of leukemia due to inherited genetic mutations.

What Are the Treatment Options?

The treatment of leukemia depends on the type and stage of the disease. Common treatment options include:

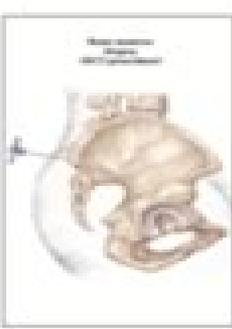

- Chemotherapy: The use of drugs to kill cancer cells.
- Radiation therapy: The use of high-energy rays to kill cancer cells.
- Targeted therapy: The use of drugs that target specific molecules on the surface of cancer cells.
- Stem cell transplant: The replacement of a patient's own or donor stem cells with healthy ones.

Some people with leukemia may also benefit from:

- Supportive care: Medications to manage symptoms such as pain, nausea, and infection.
- Clinical trials: Research studies that test new treatments.
- Bone marrow transplant: A procedure that replaces a patient's bone marrow with healthy stem cells.

It is important to work closely with your healthcare provider to determine the best treatment plan for you.
