The Wetlands Of Merseyside:

The Wetlands of Merseyside R. W. Cowell, J. B. Innes, 1994 This is the first in a new series presenting the results from English Heritage's survey of the wetlands in the north western counties of England Following introductory chapters on background and methodology the authors examine the landscape ecology and archaeology of the North Wirral mosslands the Sefton mosslands the Central and Eastern mosslands and the southern mosses The final chapter provides a synthesis of the evidence from the early Mesolithic through to the post medieval period The wider significance of the Merseyside evidence is underlined at many points for example in tracing the introduction of farming to the region perhaps several centuries earlier than for Britain as a whole Handbook for British and Irish Archaeology Cherry Lavell, 2019-08-05 Where can I find an amateur archaeological society to join How can I find out more about a particular aspect of archaeology Which are the most useful available texts in this field Which Universities run archaeology courses If you have ever asked or been asked any of the above questions then this is the book for you a one stop truly comprehensive dedicated and reliable sourcebook for archaeology In one volume the Handbook offers an astonishingly wide range of up to date information including Lists of organisations national societies and special interest groups within archaeology and contributory disciplines A catalogue of finding aids such as printed bibliographies dictionaries map lists and record office directories A guide to grant sources Lists of archaeological touring guides Bibliography of books offering starting points for almost any topic encountered in archaeology With a full subject and author index to help the reader navigate the information this Handbook is the most comprehensive guide to sources and resources available in British and Irish Archaeology Custom, Improvement and the Landscape in Early Modern Britain Richard W. Hoyle, 2017-03-02 A great deal has been written about the acceleration of English agriculture in the early modern period In the late middle ages it was hard to see that English agriculture was so very different from that of the continent but by 1750 levels of agricultural productivity in Britain were well ahead of those general in northern Europe The country had become much more urban and the proportion of the population engaged in agriculture had fallen Customary modes of behaviour whilst often bitterly defended had largely been swept away Contemporaries were quite clear that a process of improvement had taken place which had seen agriculture reshaped and made much more productive Exactly what that process was has remained surprisingly obscure This volume addresses the fundamental notion of improvement in the development of the British landscape from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century Contributors present a variety of cases of how improvement custom and resistance impacted on the local landscape which includes manorial estates enclosures fens forests and urban commons Disputes between tenants and landlords and between neighbouring landlords over improvement meant that new economic and social identities were forged in the battle between innovation and tradition The volume also includes an analysis of the role of women as agricultural improvers and a case study of what can happen when radical improvement failed The volume will be essential reading for scholars of landscape studies rural and agrarian history but will also provide a useful context for anybody studying the historical legacy of mankind's exploitation of the environment and its social economic legal and political consequences
