Policing the Largest Democracy James Vadackumchery,1998 SNI National Criminal Justice Reference Service (U.S.),1980 Contemporary Masters in Criminology Joan McCord,John H. Laub,2013-11-11 Reflecting a diversity of thought and intellectual power this unique volume provides undergraduate students with an important historical context and demonstrates the continuity of many issues in the fields of criminology and criminal justice Commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the American Society of Criminology this volume contains previously published articles by the society's president many of whom are the leading thinkers in the field. Articles examine the philosophy of punishment, policing, the politics of crime and crime control, criminological theory, drug use, white collar crime, female crime, the study of deviance, parole, prediction studies, and criminal justice policy. The Police Journal, 1985. Human Relations Alan Coffey, Edward Eldefonso, Walter Hartinger, 1971. Police-community Relations Alan Coffey, Edward Eldefonso, Walter Hartinger, 1971. The purpose of this text is to provide a resource for training police officers in the complexity of community and human relations. The text recognizes that law enforcement is faced with the need to develop line officers who are capable of not only enforcing the law but also of participating in the resolution of social problems associated with crime. The text approaches social problems from the point of view that police are primarily responsible for enforcing law and only indirectly responsible for the resolution of social problems. The authors acknowledge the importance of strengthening police community relationships. Such relationships have a direct bearing on the character of life in cities and on a community's ability to maintain stability and solve its problems. At the same time, a police department's ability to deal with crime depends to a large extent upon its relation with citizens. Since a community's attitude toward the police is influenced by the actions of individual officers, courteous and tolerant behavior by police officers in their contacts with citizens is essential. If law enforcement programs ignore the conditions that motivate the behavior of minority groups, especially in cities, police officers will continue to act in ways that invite hostility, anger, and violence. The text discusses the effect of social problems on law enforcement, equal justice for minority groups, social change, and community tension, implications of group behavior for law enforcement, the link between attitudes and prejudices and the police and community, and human relations. References, charts, and figures. State and Local Government Joseph Erigina McLean, 1953. Adult Catalog: Subjects Los Angeles County Public Library, 1970. A Review of Human Relations D.I. Labowitz, 1982. This text is not for a person interested in obtaining a thorough understanding of police in the community. Rather, it would best be utilized as a source of discussion material for police cadets. The authors raise questions on police action and reaction in the context of dealing with nonpolice citizens, generally members of minority groups. The viewpoint taken is that of the minority rather than the police. With the exception of the book's third section, the text does the job of a trained group leader in police minority relations.
