The Will Of Human Learning:

The Will In Human Learning Russell A Peterson,2022-02-11 INTRODUCTION Even a cursory glance at the literature in the science of learning theory alerts us to a flagrant omission which only gradually is being corrected I refer to what many epistemologists in guarded and hushed tones speak of as the human will No one will deny there have been attempts to provide synonyms substitute phraseology all of which have fallen far short of their good intentions These are the concepts of motivation spirit and even drive The more sophisticated theorists have proven a little braver and used the word psyche in spite of its many and differing connotations Those taking this route have failed to sense the true potential inherent in the mind concept of will In the following pages I have defined will in relation to the cognitive and affective domains of the mind What I have shown is that no learning takes place unless the mind experiences its subject or object In essence the mind must will to experience only in this way does the mind find meaning To experience the mind must be fully functional that is there must be balance among its domains namely the cognitive conative and affective Otherwise the mind is subject to the epistemological weakness of the rationalization process In this process the mind does not validate its values and therefore its learning is conditional The apprehended knowledge is uncertain and remains as question Learning theory is an intriguing subject for discussion To assist in the discussions I have included a number of simple case studies In a sense the material is all open ended This has been my intention The approach will I hope stimulate considerable thought If it does I will have succeeded in my endeavor to bring before the learning theorist the need to seriously consider the place therefore the task of the will in human learning

The Will in Human Learning Russell Arthur Peterson,1977 God, Evil, and Human Learning Fred Berthold Jr.,2012-02-01 God Evil and Human Learning explores the age old question How is it possible to believe in the God of the Christian faith when the world contains so many grievous evils Author Fred Berthold Jr examines the most influential argument used by Christian theologians to answer that question the free will defense which holds that God is not responsible for the evil in the world but that evil arises from the human misuse of free will He points out the weaknesses of this defense and provides a more adequate concept of free will Berthold argues that free will is a complex of abilities which are acquired if acquired through human learning in the context of experiences of actual goods and evils and their consequences He revises the free will defense and offers a new view of the relationship between God and his creatures

The Philosophy of Human Learning Christopher Winch,2002-01-04 The Philosophy of Human Learning addresses current concerns with the nature of human learning from a distinctive philosophical perspective Using insights derived from the work of Wittgenstein it mounts a vigorous attack on influential contemporary accounts of learning both in the romantic Rousseauian tradition and in the scientific cognotivist tradition These two schools Professor Winch argues are more closely related than is commonly realised Human learning in the digital era Netexplo (France),UNESCO.
