Robotics Kevin Klein,2016-04-02 The Three Laws of Robotics 1 A robot may not injure a human being or through inaction allow a human being to come to harm 2 A robot must obey the orders given it by human beings except where such orders would conflict with the First Law 3 A robot must protect its own existence as long as such protection does not conflict with the First or Second Law The Zeroth Law A robot may not harm humanity or by inaction allow humanity to come to harm Isaac Asimov Although this famous quote derived from Isaac Asimov professor of biochemistry at Boston University seems plausible it is highly improbable The truth is with the current status of robotic innovation we are decades or even centuries before we must worry about the consequences that robotic innovation will have for humanity in the future A robot is a simple enough idea It is a machine that can do something by itself in the simplest terms You have almost certainly seen them in movies or read about them Many people think of a metallic human looking machine when they think of a robot The reality these days is a little less dramatic than that In appearance modern robots are often complex limbs or moving tools They can complete tasks largely without the need for human assistance but they are a long way from the types of robots people have been imagining for centuries that s right the idea of the robot is very old indeed The things that robots might be able to do are a key driving force beyond their development These ideas
