Welding Techniques And Rural Practice:

Welding: Techniques and Rural Practice Jim Heather, Peter Cryer, 1997-07-11 This book is designed to provide people working in rural environments with a broad range of welding skills. Coverage of the different welding and cutting processes is done in an easy to follow manner with consideration given to safety equipment and application. To help users improve their skills with each of the welding processes practical problem solving ideas also included. Repair and reclamation techniques are discussed and there are sections on basic marking out and development. These will provide farm welders with the confidence to tackle projects detailed in the final section. This book will provide an excellent simple language guide to welding and serve as a handy reference when practical difficulties are encountered.

Farm Irrigation Neil Southorn, 1998-02-04 There is no doubt that irrigation makes a major contribution to agricultural production making a whole range of crops viable in an otherwise unreliable climate and helping insure against drought. However irrigation does not automatically guarantee a profit and acclaim it is a high cost exercise using water from increasingly scarce supplies and contributes to environmental concerns of the community. Many of the pressures facing some irrigators have been caused by a lack of understanding in the past of best practices necessary in design, installation and management. Alternative methods of irrigation are presented emphasising the characteristics of each that may make them suitable or unsuitable for particular situations. The range of crops under irrigation is very wide and so too is the range of methods available to get water to them. Horticultural crops are included as well as broadacre crops. This section is followed by technical information of the various components that make up an irrigation system and their installation. Irrigation is concerned with providing the optimum soil moisture conditions for plant growth. So too is drainage in that too much water in the soil will retard growth. Many of the concepts surrounding irrigation are applicable to a consideration of drainage so the book discusses that technology as well.

Pruning and Training Fruit Trees Warren Somerville, 1996 The viability of modern fruit production is dependent on a number of factors. Probably the most important one of these after site selection is that of orchard design. The selection of suitable cultivator and rootstock combinations is the starting point for ongoing tree training and pruning which will continue for the life of the orchard. The days of large size fruit trees producing a tonne or more of each fruit are gone forever. A modern orchardist cannot afford to wait for the trees to grow very large and the production costs of fruit on large old trees is very high.
