Thinking Through the Skin Sara Ahmed, Jackie Stacey, 2001 This collection of work engages with and extends the growing feminist literature on lived and imagined embodiment It asks for consideration of the skin as a site where bodies take form open to re inscription Thinking Through the Skin Sara Ahmed, Jackie Stacey, 2003-09-02 This exciting collection of work from leading feminist scholars including Elspeth Probyn Penelope Deutscher and Chantal Nadeau engages with and extends the growing feminist literature on lived and imagined embodiment and argues for consideration of the skin as a site where bodies take form already written upon but open to endless re inscription Individual chapters consider such issues as the significance of piercing tattooing and tanning the assault of self harm upon the skin the relation between body painting and the land among the indigenous people of Australia and the cultural economy of fur in Canada Pierced mutilated and marked mortified and glorified scarred by disease and stretched and enveloping the skin of another in pregnancy skin is seen here as both a boundary and a point of connection the place where one touches and is touched by others both the most private of experiences and the most public marker of a raced sexed and national history Figuring the Boundary between Human and Robot Dominika Lisy, 2026-02-10 Social robots are expected to become ubiquitous across different areas of both the private and public spheres of human life assisting in care education and daily tasks Hopes for meaningful efficient and enjoyable interactions with these kinds of robots drive social robotics research but there are also ethical concerns and critiques concerning negative social consequences Both sides involve assumptions about the boundaries around what it means to be human in relation to the non human In order to disentangle optimistic and pessimistic notions about this relationality there needs to be a reconsideration of how the boundaries constituting the human non human divide are understood and figured in encounters with robot bodies Following Dominika Lisy s personal experiences that have been documented as reflections diary entries and by photographing moments of meeting different social robots this thesis starts at the first point of contact the skin But how might the skin be used to rethink boundaries between humans and social robots The research in this thesis illustrates an interdisciplinary endeavour to weave together insights from feminist theory and methodology research on affective and tactile robots and the biology and neurophysiology of the skin Grounded in feminist new materialism which embraces the entanglement of matter and discourse the thesis develops a figuration of the skin through which both the form and content of the thesis text illustrate what it means to pay attention to boundaries during encounters with affective and tactile robots Figuring boundaries in this way they can be described as multilayered flexible yet sturdy hardening over time and dependent on un noticeable sensations just like the skin This thesis aims to contribute to feminist theories of human non human relationality The thesis presents a situated feminist account of making sense amidst diverse knowledges through the skin and personal embodied experiences in order to develop a sensitivity and ethical responsibility for human robot relations Sociala robotar f rv ntas bli allm nt f rekommande inom olika omr den inom b de privata och offentliga sfärer av människligt liv. De tekniska bist inom vrd utbildning och dagliga sysslor. F r hoppningar om meningsfulla effektiva och angen ma interaktioner med denna typ av robotar driver forskningen inom social robotik men det finns ocks etiska farh gor och kritik som r r negativa sociala konsekvenser. B da sidor ber r antaganden om gr nserna f r vad det inneb r att vara m nniska i relation till det icke m nskliga. F r att reda ut optimistiska och pessimistiska uppfattningar om denna relationalitet kr vs en ompr vning av hur gr nserna som skiljer det m nskliga fr n det icke m nskliga fr st s och utformas i m ten med robotkroppar. Utifr n Dominika Lisys personliga erfarenheter som har dokumenterats i form av reflektioner, dagboksanteckningar och fotografier av m ten med olika sociala robotar tar denna avhandling sin utg ngspunkt i den f rsta kontaktpunkten huden. Men hur kan huden anv ndas f r att ompr va gr nserna mellan m nniskor och sociala robotar. Forskningen i denna avhandling illustrerar en tv rvetenskaplig str van att v va samman insikter fr n feministisk teori och metodologi forskning om affektiva och taktila robotar samt hudens biologi och neurofysiologi. Med utg ngspunkt i feministisk nymaterialism som omfattar sammanfl tningen av materia och diskurs utvecklar avhandlingen huden som en figuration genom vilken b de avhandlingstextens form och inneh ll illustrerar vad det inneb r att uppm rksamma gr nser i m ten med affektiva och taktila robotar. Genom att figurera gr nser p detta s tt kan de beskrivas som m ngskiktade flexibla men nd robusta h rdnande ver tid och beroende av o m rkbara f rnimmelser precis som huden sj lv. Denna avhandling syftar till att bidra till feministiska teorier om m nsklig icke m nsklig relationalitet. Avhandlingen presenterar en situerad feministisk redog rrelse av meningsskapande mitt bland olika kunskapstraditioner genom huden och personliga f rkroppsligade erfarenheter i syfte att utveckla en k nslighet och etisk ansvarsk nsla f r relationer mellan m nniskor och robotar.

Bodies, Affects, Politics Steve Pile, 2021-04-12 This book seeks to understand the coexistence of bodily regimes and the politics that emerge from the clash between them. Presents a novel conceptual model for understanding the relationship between bodies and affects. Reworks Ranci re s notions of the distribution of the sensible and the aesthetic unconscious. Establishes a dynamic and multiple understanding of the repressive distributive and communicative unconscious by rethinking Freudian psychoanalysis. Utilizes a variety of empirical materials from Hollywood movies to Freud s case studies. Sets its argument about politics within the context of significant social events to ensure its conceptual and empirical material is relevant to the contemporary political moment.

Race in the 21st Century John Hartigan (Jr.), 2015 What is the state of race relations in the U S. Are we making progress toward ending racial discrimination and prejudice. What exactly does race mean. In Race in the 21st Century: Ethnographic Approaches Second Edition John Hartigan Jr takes an anthropological look at such questions by introducing students to the study of race through qualitative methods. In the first text to take an explicitly ethnographic approach Hartigan summarizes and explains the current state of social science knowledge on race in the U S motivating students to think through essential questions about race in relation to their own lives. In contrast with many texts Race in the 21st Century focuses not on essential differences between racial or ethnic groups but rather on the commonalities. Hartigan concentrates on the particular contexts in which people actively engage and respond to racial meanings and identities In this way he encourages readers to think critically about the meaning of race The second edition of Race in the 21st Century features a new chapter Postracial America which examines contentious arguments about whether or how race still matters in the U S today It engages students fully in the important question of what postracial America might mean or look like
