University And Revolution:

The University and Revolution, 1969 Rebellion in the University Seymour Martin Lipset, 1972 University Students and Revolution in Cuba, 1920-1968 Jaime Suchlicki, 1969 Cover title The Dublin University Calendar Trinity College (Dublin, Ireland), 1922 The Campus and a Nation in Crisis Willis Rudy, 1996 This book demonstrates how colleges and universities have played a vital role during times of great crisis in American history responding actively and helpfully to all the major challenges confronting their country The colleges of the land became politicized repeatedly by such momentous developments as the American Revolution the Civil War between the North and the South the two vast global conflicts of the twentieth century and America's controversial involvement in Southeast Asia Campus life became intensely fractious during these difficult and turbulent periods Violence sometimes accompanied the campus activism While there were significant differences in the response of groups on the campuses students and professors reacted differently for example to the crises of earlier times as compared to those in more recent years there is an element of continuity That thread of continuity from the Revolutionary era to Vietnam was the fact that time after time the members of the academic communities sought to resolve the nation's crises constructively They rallied to the cause of colonial rights and ultimately political independence They supported the aims of their embattled sections North and South They sought to influence their nation's responses to the global crises of the twentieth century And they campaigned to extricate the nation from an increasingly costly military entanglement in Southeast Asia In all five of these tests of national purpose the colleges and universities while not the ultimate decision makers helped shape the eventual patterns of America's response in an important way The Rise of the Social Sciences and the Formation of Modernity J. Heilbron, Lars Magnusson, Björn Wittrock, 1998 This volume offers one of the first systematic analyses of the rise of modern social science Contrary to the standard accounts of various social science disciplines the essays in this volume demonstrate that modern social science actually emerged during the critical period between 1750 and 1850 It is shown that the social sciences were a crucial element in the conceptual and epistemic revolution which paralleled and partly underpinned the political and economic transformations of the modern world From a consistently comparative perspective a group of internationally leading scholars takes up fundamental issues such as the role of the Enlightenment and the French Revolution in the shaping of the social sciences the changing relationships between political theory and moral discourse the profound transformation of philosophy and the constitution of political economy and statistics University Debaters' Annual Edward Charles Mabie, 1927 The Catholic University Bulletin, 1904
