Developing Metrics for Assessing Engineering Instruction National Academy of Engineering, Steering Committee for Evaluating Instructional Scholarship in Engineering, 2009-05-15 Faculty in all disciplines must continually prioritize their time to reflect the many demands of their faculty obligations but they must also prioritize their efforts in ways that will improve the prospects of career advancement The current perception is that research contributions are the most important measure with respect to faculty promotion and tenure decisions and that teaching effectiveness is less valued regardless of the stated weighting of research teaching and service In addition methods for assessing research accomplishments are well established even though imperfect whereas metrics for assessing teaching learning and instructional effectiveness are not as well defined or well established Developing Metrics for Assessing Engineering Instruction provides a concise description of a process to develop and institute a valid and acceptable means of measuring teaching effectiveness in order to foster greater acceptance and rewards for faculty efforts to improve their performance of the teaching role that makes up a part of their faculty responsibility Although the focus of this book is in the area of engineering the concepts and approaches are applicable to all fields in higher education

Survive and Thrive Wendy Crone, 2022-05-31 The experience of an untenured faculty member is highly dependent on the quality of the mentoring they receive This mentoring may come from a number of different sources and the concept of developing a constellation of mentors is highly recommended but a mentoring relationship that is guided by the mentee's needs will be the most productive Often however the mentee does not know their own needs what questions to ask and what topics they should discuss with a mentor This book provides a guide to the mentoring process for untenured faculty Perspectives are provided and questions posed on topics ranging from establishing scholarly expertise and developing professional networks to personal health and balancing responsibilities The questions posed are not intended for the mentee to answer in isolation rather a junior faculty member should approach these questions throughout their untenured years with the help of their mentors Survive and Thrive A Guide for Untenured Faculty will help to facilitate the mentoring process and lead junior faculty to a path where they can move beyond just surviving and truly thrive in their position Table of Contents Tough Questions About Why You Are Here Joining Your Department and Discipline Establishing Expertise Developing Networks Relationships and Mentoring Activities Getting Support and Evaluating Your Personal Health Planning for the Future Conclusion

Equal Rites, Unequal Outcomes Lilli S. Hornig, 2012-12-06 Thirteen years ago in June 1988 the Radcliffe Class of 1953 celebrated its 35th Reunion Amidst the festivities we who participated repeatedly asked ourselves the same two questions Is Harvard as sexist as it was when we were undergraduates If not what is the status of women at Harvard today To find the answers we formed an ad hoc committee and charged the members to report back to the class in five years The committee interviewed selected senior and junior Harvard faculty Harvard and Radcliffe administrators students and alumni We identified and studied Harvard and Radcliffe reports on their institutions and on their student organizations We contributed to and participated in a 1990 Radcliffe Focus Group A Survey of Alumnae and Undergraduate Perceptions We found that the University was not as sexist in 1988 as it had been in 1953 Yet the status of women though improved remained quite unequal to that of men Radcliffe College was organizationally separate from Harvard University until 1977 when a non merger merger was implemented However Radcliffe had no faculty of its own and employed Harvard faculty to teach its students in strictly separate classes until World War II The merger effort was completed in 1999 with the complete integration of the two institutions and the formation of the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study a tub on its own
