Jessie Granatstein doesn't think she'll have anything to say in the journal her teacher asks her to write until suddenly the words come tumbling out. Zoe Eberhardt has been raised and cherished by the strong, powerful women in her family, but when she turns fourteen she starts to see that she'll soon have to establish an identity of her own. Marylee is quiet and thoughtful, unlike her confident, sparkling mother. But when she sees something she's not supposed to, she realizes it might be time to start speaking out. For the young women in these stories, growing up may be complicated, but it always leads in surprising new directions.

MIMI AND OTHER STORIES Arnold Bennett, 2015-12-02

On a Saturday afternoon in late October, Edward Coe, a satisfactory average successful man of thirty-five, was walking slowly along the King's Road, Brighton. A native and inhabitant of the Five Towns in the Midlands, he had the brusque and energetic mien of the Midlands. It could be seen that he was a stranger to the south and in fact he was now viewing for the first time the vast and glittering spectacle of the southern pleasure city in the unique glory of her autumn season. A spectacle to enliven any man by its mere splendour. And yet Edward Coe was gloomy. One reason for his gloom was that he had just left a bicycle with a deflated back tyre to be repaired at a shop in Preston Street. Not perhaps an adequate reason for gloom. Well, that depends. He had been informed by the blue-clad repairer, after due inspection, that the trouble was not a common puncture but a malady of the valve, mysterious. And the deflation was not the sole cause of his gloom. There was another. He was on his honeymoon. Understand me, not a honeymoon of romance but a real honeymoon. Who that has ever been on a real honeymoon can look back upon the adventure and faithfully say that it was an unmixed ecstasy of joy. A honeymoon is in its nature and consequences so solemn, so dangerous, and so pitted with startling surprises that the most irresponsible bridegroom, the most light-hearted, the least in love, must have moments of grave anxiety. And Edward Coe was far from irresponsible. Nor was he only a little in love. Moreover, the circumstances of his marriage were peculiar, and he had married a dark, brooding, passionate girl.
