

SUBMARINES

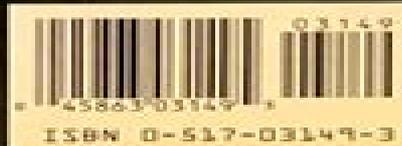

HUNTER/KILLERS & BOOMERS

An illustrated guide to warships of the undersea realm

With an arsenal more powerful than all the bombs dropped in World War II, today's nuclear ballistic missile submarine, or "boomer," is at once an awesome instrument of war and an effective means of maintaining world peace. But in peace or war, its natural enemy is the nuclear attack submarine, or "hunter/killer"—a fast, stealthy undersea predator whose primary mission is to stalk and, if need be, destroy enemy boomers in the cold, dark depths of the ocean. SUBMARINES: HUNTER/KILLERS & BOOMERS offers readers an exciting and comprehensive look at these vessels in the navies of the United States and the Soviet Union. Lavishly illustrated with scores of compelling photographs—many of them in full color—the text provides a detailed yet highly readable account of the boats that now rule the world's oceans. You'll find:

- History's first recorded submarine attack, made against an English warship during America's Revolutionary War
- Background on the superpower standoff, and the part boomers and hunter/killers play in deterring nuclear war
- Individual profiles of 18 boomer and hunter/killer types currently in service in the U.S. and Soviet navies
- Specification charts listing armament, performance, and crew
- Information on underwater weaponry, submarine launched ballistic missiles, sonar and electronics, submarine communications, propulsion systems, and the ocean environment and how it affects submarine operations
- A gripping scenario of an American hunter/killer searching for a Soviet boomer on the eve of World War III
