The Children of the Poor Jacob August Rüs,1915 The Children of the Poor (Classic Reprint) Jacob A. Riis,2015-07-19 Excerpt from The Children of the Poor To my little ones who as I lay down my pen come rushing in from the autumn fields their hands filled with flowers for the poor children I inscribe this book May the love that shines in their eager eyes never grow cold within them then they shall yet grow up to give a helping hand in working out this problem which so plagues the world to day As to their father s share it has been a very small and simple one and now it is done Other hands may carry forward the work My aim has been to gather the facts for them to build upon I said it in How the Other Half Lives and now in sending this volume to the printer I can add nothing The two books are one Each supplements the other Ours is an age of facts It wants facts not theories and facts I have endeavored to set down in these pages The reader may differ with me as to the application of them He may be right and I wrong But we shall not quarrel as to the facts themselves I think A false prophet in our day could do less harm than a careless reporter That name I hope I shall not deserve To lay aside a work that has been so long a part of ones life is like losing a friend But for the one lost I have gained many They have been much to me About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
