

THE CHILDREN OF HERACLES

Scene: A temple of Zeus at Marathon, on the north-east coast of Attica, the point of the Argolic peninsula, at which old Pelops and the young sons of Heracles have taken refuge as suppliants.

CHORUS

Since long ago Thybes's citizens and others as Pelops' men salute thy throne's sacred hearth, whilst thy sons refuse, mind to manly heart unyielding, to exile to this city and things new to deal with,
good only to himself.

Thou'lt know them by experience, not by name.

I myself could have found plenty in Argos,

but they compare and flout thy duty to men:

thou art more soft than shared with Heracles.

120 In his many labours, while he was still with us, and more that he should do because I keep his children here, would my being and try to protect them — though moulding protection myself.

For when their father left the earth behind,

Demeter's hand at first he held me all:

but we engaged. In my hands here our city but kept our lives. In a woman's name we stole, fearing from one man's hands to another's.

130 For, setting off our other misdeeds, Demeter's will fit to suffer and further wrongs on us:

whenever he heard we'd settled ourselves somewhere,

he sent heralds to demand we be arraigned and delivered from the land that'd put us that Argos was no small city, as I read of this,

and that he himself was prosperous and successful.

And they, looking at the noblemen on my part and at the children here, so small and without a father, they ended up giving us quiet to the stranger guest — no one among his friends nor those that had.

140 For myself, 'tis a fellow with the orphic children,

a fellow mother with these orphans, but now I refuse to betray them, lest people might say,

"I could have had the children's father's men show, before he was stung and prodded through,

even though he's a member of their family."

With no place of our own in all of Greece, and no name, to Demeter and the orphan-feeding gods,

Critical Moments in Classical Literature Richard Hunter, 2009-05-28 Through a series of innovative critical readings Richard Hunter builds a picture of how the ancients discussed the meaning of literary works and their importance in society He pays particular attention to the interplay of criticism and creativity by not treating criticism in isolation from the works which the critics discussed Attention is given both to the development of a history of criticism as far as our sources allow and to the constant recurrence of similar themes across the centuries At the head of the book stands the contest of Aeschylus and Euripides in Aristophanes Frogs which foreshadows more of the subsequent critical tradition than is often realised Other chapters are devoted to ancient reflection on Greek and Roman comedy to the Augustan critic Dionysius of Halicarnassus to Longinus On the Sublime and to Plutarch All Greek and Latin is translated
