The Wilds of Poetry David Hinton, 2017-07-25 An exploration of the emerging Western consciousness of how deeply we belong to the wild Cosmos as seen through the lineage of modern America's great avant garde poets a thrilling journey with today's premier translator of the Chinese classics Henry David Thoreau in The Maine Woods describes a moment on Mount Katahdin when all explanations and assumptions fell away for him and he was confronted with the wonderful inexplicable thusness of things David Hinton takes that moment as the starting point for his account of a rewilding of consciousness in the West a dawning awareness of our essential oneness with the world around us Because there was no Western vocabulary for this perception it fell to poets to make the first efforts at articulation and those efforts were largely driven by Taoist and Chan Zen Buddhist ideas imported from ancient China Hinton chronicles this rewilding through the lineage of avant garde poetry in twentieth century America from Walt Whitman Ezra Pound and Robinson Jeffers to Gary Snyder W S Merwin and beyond including generous selections of poems that together form a compelling anthology of ecopoetry In his much admired translations Hinton has re-created ancient Chinese rivers and mountains poetry as modern American poetry here he reenvisioned modern American poetry as an extension of that ancient Chinese tradition an ecopoetry that weaves consciousness into the Cosmos in radical and fundamental ways

Farming the Words Robert Grenier, 2009 As you can see letters are being drawn more toward the insides of each other whereas I hope the separateness of each is still real It's possible that it happens without language and that direct seeing in fact doesn't need words I like to look at things singly and think about them multiply I just hear it like a song in the air
