Abstract

Review Article

This study aims at clarifying the importance of the application of total quality management and its implications on higher education institutions. Bright Star University in Brega was selected as a study field for the possibility of applying the concept of total quality management to higher education services for continuous improvement and quality assurance of performance and outputs. Questionnaire was used as the main instrument for collecting the necessary data; total of (148) questionnaires were prepared and distributed to the target sample. Bright Star teaching staff members, (112) were collected. To achieve the objective of this study, SPSS v.25 software package was used as a tool for data analysis. Several interesting results have been reached, the most important of which are (the proportion of the explained variables variance for the application of comprehensive quality management), as it was sufficient for the variables of the university administration's interest in the application of total quality management, it gave an explanation of approximately 57%, and (the proportion of the explained variables variance of the application of comprehensive air management, it was sufficient for the variables of the role of faculty members in improving performance and raising quality in higher education institutions, it gave an explanation of approximately 60%.

INTRODUCTION

Total quality management is a modern management philosophy based on a number of modern concepts that are related to combinations of fundamental administrative means, innovative efforts and specialized technical skills to raise the level of performance and continuous improvement. The factor analysis is a statistical method used in the study of phenomena with the aim of returning them to the factors affecting them. It is a mathematical process that aims to explain the positive correlation coefficients that have statistical significance between the various variables. Therefore, it was used to determine the importance of applying total quality management to higher education institutions, to create new variables that summarize all the information that can be available in the original variables, to determine whether the resulting variables reflect patterns of relationships with each other, and to reach the least possible number of themes or factors that enable us to express the greatest degree of variance between these variables.

Research problem

- What are the most important factors that affect the application of total quality management?
- What are the variables that explain the greatest possible total variance?

Objectives of the study

- Using the exploratory factor analysis in the manner of the main components to extract the factors affecting the total quality management on higher education institutions.
- Summarizing the variables in a smaller number of factors affecting TQM on higher education institutions.
- Highlighting a set of latent elements that explain the relationships between the variables in the study of total quality on higher education institutions.
