The Daily Round:

Global Exchanges and Gender Perspectives in Africa Jean-Bernard Ouédraogo, Roseline M. Achieng', 2011 The global perspectives adopted in this volume by the authors from different academic disciplines and social experiences ought not to be locked in sterile linearity which within process of globalisation would fail to perceive the irreversible opening up of the worlds of the south There is the need within the framework of the analyses presented here to quite cogently define the sense of the notion of the market The market here does not refer to saving or the localised exchange of goods a perspective which is imposed by normative perceptions In fact a strictly materialistic reading of exchange would be included since every social practice and interaction implies a communitarian transaction meanwhile the exchange system under study here broadens to root out the obligation of the maximisation of mercantile profit from the cycle of exchange Trade here would have a meaning closer to those of old one of human interaction in a way that one could also refer to bon commerce between humans In one way trade places itself at the heart of social exchanges included the power of money and is carried along by a multitude of social interactions The reader is called upon to take into account the major mercantile formations of the social trade system the market society without forgetting the diversity of exchange routes as well as the varying modalities of social construction at the margins and within market logics those of implicit value in trade between humans which the texts herein also seek to review The age old project of restructuring the domestic economy the market society as it has developed in the West whence it has set out to conquer the whole wide world places at the very centre of the current capitalist expansion the challenge of imperatively reshaping gender identity inter alia in market relations Perspectives in Ethology P.P.G. Bateson, Peter H. Klopfer, 2013-06-29 This volume is subtitled Alternatives because we wanted to devote at least a part of it to the alternative ways in which members of the same species behave in a given situation Not so very long ago the supposition among many ethologists was that if one animal behaved in a particular way then all other members of the same age and sex would do the same Any differences in the ethogram between individuals were to be attributed to normal biological variation Such thinking is less common nowadays after the discovery of dramatic differences between members of the same species which are of the same age and sex Alternative modes of behavior though now familiar raise particularly interesting questions about current function evolutionary history and mechanism Do the differences represent equally satisfactory solutions to a given problem Are some of the solutions the best that those animals can do given their body size and general condition Is an alternative solution adopted because so many other individuals have taken the first If so do the frequencies reached at equilibrium depend on differential survival of genetically distinct types or do they result from decisions taken by individual animals If the alternatives are induced during development as are the castes of social insects what is required for such triggering The questions about alternative ways of behaving are addressed in some of the chapters in this volume
