

GAIA: Dialogues between the book arts, natural sciences & plant humanities

The term Gaia has multiple meanings, primarily rooted in ancient Greek mythology and modern scientific theory. In Greek mythology, Gaia is the personification of the Earth, a primordial goddess and the mother of all creation. In a scientific context, the Gaia hypothesis, proposed by James Lovelock in 1972, suggests that the Earth is a self-regulating system where living and non-living components interact to maintain conditions suitable for life.

GAIA: Dialogues between the book arts, natural sciences & plant humanities realises the long-held wish of Rosalind Cleaver – the late Senior Special Collections Librarian of the JGCBA – to curate an exhibition of artists' books from the collection that reflect both an artist's reading of the world and our place within it, as well as a call to stewardship and to tread lightly on the earth. To Ros's initial selection of books, the curators have added others from the collection, material displays from the C.E. Moss Herbarium, and Life Sciences Museum, University of the Witwatersrand, and selected artworks completed by Ros while exploring South Africa's grand biodiversity.
