

The Use of Body Language in English Teaching

Xiaoling Yang

Foreign Language School, Nanchang Normal University, NanChang, Jiangxi, China

Abstract—Body language means action, expression and posture with something meaningful. In classroom teaching, the teachers' body language can help to increase the effect of sound language. It is an important method for teachers to learn about the students by noticing the students' body language. Teachers can get feedback information by watching the students' expressions in their eyes, on their faces and noticing their actions, as to adjust and organize the teaching in class timely and effectively. Nowadays nonverbal communication has been used in many fields. With the continual reform of language teaching and learning methods, teachers have great challenge in organize the classes in English and create English-learning circumstances. However, with students' limitation, teachers have to simplify their teaching language with the help of facial expression and body movements.

Index Terms—use, body language, English teaching

I. INTRODUCTION

Body language is an important medium in people's communication. It includes gestures and facial expressions. As we know, language is important in communication, but nonverbal communication also can't be neglected. American psychologist Albert said, people get 55% information from expressions.

In classroom teaching, nonverbal communication is more important than verbal one. When teaching, teachers will try their best to arouse the student's interest of learning English. Body language as a secondary means of teaching English is vivid, it can warm up the class atmosphere, help students to understand the point, shorten the distance between teacher and students, stir interest of learning English, improving the quality of education.

So, in teaching, teachers should learn and work hard to master the means of communication in the application of classroom, servicing teaching.

II. THE NECESSITY AND IMPORTANCE OF BODY LANGUAGE IN ENGLISH TEACHING

Body language is a silent and true language, which can express a person's inner world, it always catch one's eye mostly in non-communicative. As a non-communicative, body language is the support and supplement of teaching, and occupies an important position in teaching. A qualified teacher needs not only profound knowledge and good eloquence, but also dignified and harmonized body language. Just like the educationist Makarenko (1998) said: "If a teacher is no expressions and not good at express to people, it's not a qualified teacher." (P. 52)

A. The Importance of Body Language

If a teacher can be just right of using body language in classroom teaching, it's every look, every smiles, every action will have a strong psychological effect on students. At this time, silence is the best words. Therefore, the body language takes an important place that oral language can't replace.

1. To enhance the educational influence

Teaching by example is better than word. Teaching by example of teacher is reflected in many ways, and body language is a part of teaching by example. (Brown, 2002, P.367)On the communication between teachers and students, all of the attitudes, feelings and self-cultivation are displayed through the instrument, facial expression, gestures, glances and even clothing, hairstyle have far-reaching implications on students.

The appearance is the first impression of teachers to students and students' preferences of a subject always begin with the goodwill, admiration of teachers. It will give students a good impression and add the charm of education, if teachers are well groomed, smartly dressed, generous and conversely, if teachers have fluffy and messy hair, wear slovenly and untidy clothes, or indulge in dress up, fancy dress, it will give students an irresponsible, hot-tempered, half-hearted impression, and may lead the students in private discussions, divert the students' attention, affect classroom teaching. The teachers' appearance should be neither dressed up, not old fashioned. It not only maintains modesty, but also follows time fashioned and personal style. The appearance should be just with the demeanor and temperament of teachers, set a good educational style to students. This is a more conducive atmosphere for study, which will make students more relaxed, enjoyable to learning.

2. To improve the effects of sound language

In English teaching, teachers transmit information mainly rely on oral language, but using body language to attract students' attention is more lively, exact and effective. Body language is also indispensable when communicating. On the one hand, body language can transmit information directly. In classroom, teachers can convey the sure or unsure
