longtime fan of Bryan Hurt's stories and what a joy to have them all together now in this book. They are a soup pot of the funniest dry sentences plus unusual facts that he unearthed from who knows where and an unstated humanity tucked inside those facts and a constant eye on the oddness of culture and the lilt of a well-placed phrase and a carrot. In our endlessly data-packed world, Hurt's keen sparseness is a welcome addition to the bookshelves. Aimee Bender, New York Times bestselling author of The Particular Sadness of Lemon Cake. Bryan Hurt's stories are like no one else's. They are by turns hilarious, whimsical, arresting, and heartbreaking, but what makes them such a delight is the sly simplicity and off-handed charm of their telling. T. C. Boyle, New York Times bestselling author of The Tortilla Curtain, Winner of the Starcherone Prize for Innovative Fiction.

The Fourth Man Andrew Boyle, 1979. On May 25, 1951, at the height of the cold war, two British diplomats, Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, disappeared from Great Britain just as they were about to be apprehended as spies for the Soviet Union. The defection of these members of the establishment stunned the nation. The notorious case was reopened by the serialization in The London Observer of Andrew Boyle's book The Climate of Treason: Five Who Spied for Russia, which implied that the fourth man, the Soviet agent who had tipped off Burgess and Maclean that British Intelligence was hot on their trail, was 72-year-old Sir Anthony Blunt, the highly respected art historian and Surveyor of the Queen's Pictures. A political storm swept Parliament when it learned that Sir Anthony had been granted immunity from prosecution when he secretly confessed to espionage in 1969 and that the Queen had long had in her employ a former spy who was quickly stripped of his knighthood. Mr. Boyle seeks to explain how intelligent middle-class and upper-middle-class students might have become Communists and traitors in the 30s, the postwar failure of nerve, the decline of empire, the disarray of the Labor Party, massive unemployment, boredom, and so on. He absorbs with an account of upper-class flirtations with Fascism, with the memories of men and women who knew the three-way back when, with digressions into the minds of ministers and poets.
