Transboundary Freshwater Dispute Resolution:

Transboundary Freshwater Dispute Resolution Heather L. Beach, 2000 This book provides a comprehensive review of the relevant literature on managing conflicts stemming from the quantity and quality problems of water around the world. So far few comprehensive and interdisciplinary analyses of such international surface water conflicts have been produced. The literature surveyed indicates that while in many areas there has been extensive research and analysis there continues to be a need for more studies on the specific situations that lead to conflicts over water and other environment resources. Lateral learning an attempt to understand the similarities between all conflicts over natural resources will lend itself to future applications in predicting and preventing these conflicts. A survey of international watersheds provides some bibliographical and general data collected from over 200 transboundary watersheds. A subset of case studies of the exhaustive list of international watersheds is examined in greater detail. A related effort is a compilation and analysis of relevant water treaties and the rationale for their implementations. Transboundary Water Disputes Itzhak E. Kornfeld, 2019-02-21 A thorough analysis of how effectively international courts and tribunals adjudicate transboundary water disputes using detailed case studies.

Rethinking Water Management Caroline Figueres, Johan Rockstrom, Cecilia Tortajada, 2012 If water resources are to be distributed efficiently equitably and cost effectively in this rapidly changing world then it is clear that current water management practices are no longer feasible. Innovative approaches are required to meet the increasing water demands of a growing world population and economy and the needs of the ecosystems supporting them. New approaches have to be employed at global national and local levels. In Rethinking Water Management a new generation of water experts from around the world examine the critical challenges confronting the water profession including rainwater and groundwater management recycling and reuse water rights transboundary access to water and financing of water. They offer important new perspectives on the use management and conservation of fresh water in terms of both quantity and quality for the domestic agricultural and industrial sectors and show how a new set of paradigms can be applied to successfully manage water for the future. Caroline Figueres is Head of the Urban Infrastructure Department at UNESCO IHE Water Education Institute in The Netherlands. Cecilia Tortajada is Vice President of the Third World Centre for Water Management in Mexico and Vice President elect of the International Water Resources Association. Johan Rockstrom is Water Resources Expert at UNESCO IHE.

Security and Environment in the Mediterranean Hans Günter Brauch, Peter H. Liotta, Antonio Marquina, Paul F. Rogers, Mohammad El-Sayed Selim, 2012-12-06 In this volume security specialists peace researchers environmental scholars demographers as well as climate desertification water food and urbanisation specialists from the Middle East and North Africa Europe and North America review security and conflict prevention in the Mediterranean. They also analyse NATO's Mediterranean security dialogue and offer conceptualisations on security and perceptions of security challenges as seen in North and South. The latter half of the book analyses environmental security and conflicts in the Mediterranean and environmental consequences of World War II the Gulf War the Balkan wars and the Middle East conflict It also examines factors of global environmental change population growth climate change desertification water scarcity food and urbanisation issues as well as natural disasters Furthermore it draws conceptual conclusions for a fourth phase of research on human and environmental security and peace as well as policy conclusions for cooperation and partnership in the Mediterranean in the 21st century

Shared Borders, Shared Waters Sharon B. Megdal, Robert G. Varady, Susanna Eden, 2012-12-18 This collection of papers examines water management in two of the worlds prominent arid transboundary areas facing similar challenges In the Middle East the chronically water short Israeli Palestinian region has recognized the need both to conserve and supplement its traditional water sources Across the globe on the North American continent A

Interstate Arbitration and the Peaceful Resolution of Transboundary Fresh Water Disputes Tamar Meshel, 2020 Predictions that interstate fresh water disputes will increase in the future have led to a vast body of research on tools and techniques to manage shared freshwater resources so as to prevent such disputes from arising however relatively little attention has been paid to the need for effective ways to resolve such disputes peacefully if and when they do arise History suggests that States usually attempt to resolve fresh water disputes by way of non legal processes such as negotiation or mediation However such mechanisms are not always effective or efficient and may lead to deadlock Arbitration on the other hand can provide an effective yet flexible process for the resolution of such disputes but it has been rarely employed or even considered in this context This paper sets out to examine the potential for arbitration to be effectively employed by States in the resolution of fresh water disputes It first describes the unique nature of these disputes briefly examines the international law principles governing them as well as the main mechanisms used for their resolution and evaluates their adequacy It then suggests a new approach to interstate arbitration intended to revive it in the context of fresh water dispute resolution This approach calls for a return to the original purpose and true nature of arbitration which rather than constituting a purely legal mechanism similar to judicial settlement was intended to be a more flexible just and quasi diplomatic alternative to it It also sets out to revamp the Optional Rules for Arbitration of Disputes Relating to Natural Resources and or the Environment of the Permanent Court of Arbitration and adapt them to the specific context of fresh water disputes and the original quasi diplomatic spirit of arbitration Value of Water--different Approaches in Transboundary Water Management ,2005 Complexities with Transboundary Water Resource Management ,2001 The Evolution of Interstate Arbitration and the Peaceful Resolution of Transboundary Freshwater Disputes Tamar Meshel,2017 There is no single natural resource on which the world depends more than freshwater Unfortunately climate change depletion of resources population growth unequal distribution and inefficient use all mean that freshwater is rapidly becoming a scarce resource aptly named the Blue Gold Further fueling the competition over freshwater is the fact that many of the freshwater resources available for human consumption are not contained within national borders but are rather unevenly distributed among two or more states As states strive to take advantage of shared freshwater passing through their territory they often disregard or harm the interests of other states and disputes may arise as a result Moreover even though the core principles of international water law designed to prevent and resolve such disputes are commonly viewed as forming part of customary international law their interpretation remains controversial and the main multilateral treaty codifying them has failed to gain wide acceptance Therefore transboundary freshwater disputes TFDs may not be readily solved by juridical decisions and states might be reluctant to submit these for legal resolution by an international court Rather they most attempt to resolve these by way of bilateral negotiation or non binding third party mechanisms such as mediation conciliation and good offices However such mechanisms are not always effective in resolving TFDs while arbitration presents an effective and flexible alternative for such resolution This article therefore sets out to examine the potential of arbitration to be effectively employed by states in the resolution of TFDs
