Rifkin investigates the dangers of seeking to include Indigenous peoples within settler temporal frameworks. Claims that Native peoples should be recognized as coeval with Euro Americans. Rifkin argues implicitly treat dominant non native ideologies and institutions as the basis for defining time itself. How though can Native peoples be understood as dynamic and changing while also not assuming that they belong to a present inherently shared with non natives. Drawing on physics phenomenology queer studies and postcolonial theory Rifkin develops the concept of settler time to address how Native peoples are both consigned to the past and inserted into the present in ways that normalize non native histories geographies and expectations. Through analysis of various kinds of texts including government documents film fiction and autobiography he explores how Native experiences of time exceed and defy such settler impositions. In underscoring the existence of multiple temporalities Rifkin illustrates how time plays a crucial role in Indigenous peoples expressions of sovereignty and struggles for self determination.

For those instructors who wish to delve into particular aspects of cancer biology in greater depth each chapter contains a list of suggested readings that expand the detail as needed. The text also emphasizes the scientific evidence that underlies cancer biology and teaches students to think critically about this evidence as there are constantly new breakthroughs and reports in this field. For students who need the review there are brief reviews of several topics related to DNA replication and repair cell division cell signaling and inheritance patterns in chapters where these subjects are relevant. By including these reviews the text is both accessible and engaging to a broad audience of readers who are studying cancer biology for the first time as well as an interested general audience.
