Timber and the Forest Service David A. Clary,1988-12-01 Nearly one quarter of America is covered with forests almost 800 million acres There are 151 national forests comprising close to 200 million acres in thirty nine states and Puerto Rico These protected lands are administered by the U S Forest Service an agency of the Department of Agriculture David Clary here examines the history of and controversies surrounding the Forest Service s policies for timber management in our national forests In this first in depth study of the political bureaucratic social and ideological relationships between the Forest Service and the production of timber Clary traces the continuity in the agency s outlook from its creation in 1905 through fears of a timber famine to the clear cutting controversies of the mid 1970s He shows convincingly that despite legislative remedies and agency reports timber production has remained the agency s first priority and that other multiple uses recreation watershed protection wilderness livestock grazing and wildlife management were regulated so that they would not interfere with potential timber harvests Throughout its history the agency is shown to have been enchanted with the objective of producing timber Clary s theme in what he describes as an administrative political scientific and anecdotal history is that the Forest Service exhibited consistent actions and attitudes over the years and failed to confront realistically changes in the national culture that altered what the American people wanted from the forests and the Forest Service

Forest Service. Northern Region,1944      A Burning Issue Robert Henry Nelson,2000 Created in the early 20th century to provide scientific management of the nation s forests the U S Forest Service was for many years regarded as a model agency in the federal government The author contends that this reputation is undeserved and the Forest Service s performance today is unacceptable Not only has scientific management proven impossible in practice it is also objectionable in principle Furthermore the author argues that the Forest Service lacks a coherent vision and prefers to sponsor only fashionable environmental solutions most recently ecosystem management Describing its history and failures the author advocates replacing the service with a decentralized system to manage the protection of national forests      Reforming the Forest Service Randal O'Toole,1988 Reforming the Forest Service contributes a completely new view to the current debate on the management of our national forests Randal O Toole argues that poor management is an institutional problem he shows that economic inefficiencies and environmental degradation are the inevitable result of the well intentioned but poorly designed laws that govern the Forest Service In this book he proposes sweeping reforms in the structure of the agency and new budgetary incentives as the best way to improve management This book is a must reading for environmentalists academics forest policy analysts Forest Service officials and members of Congress      Early Days in the Forest Service United States.
