The Language of Trauma John Zilcosky,2021-06-01 From the Napoleonic Wars to the invention of the railway to the shell shock of World War I writers tried to give voice to the suffering that war and industrial technology had wrought all around them Yet they like the doctors who treated these victims repeatedly ran up against the incapacity of language to describe such anguish those who suffered trauma those who tried to heal it and those who represented it were all unable to find the appropriate words In The Language of Trauma John Zilcosky uncovers the reactions of three major central European writers E T A Hoffmann Sigmund Freud and Franz Kafka to the birth of modern trauma in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries Zilcosky makes the case that Hoffmann Freud and Kafka managed to find the language of trauma precisely by not attempting to name the trauma conclusively and instead allowing their writing to mimic the experience itself Just as the victims symptoms seemed not to correspond to a physical cause the writers words did not connect directly to the objects of the world While doctors attempted to overcome this indeterminacy these writers embraced and investigated it they sought a language that described language s tragic limits and that in so doing exemplified the wider literary and philosophical crisis of their time Zilcosky boldly argues that this linguistic scepticism emerged together with the medical inability to name the experience of trauma He thereby places trauma where it belongs at the heart of both medicine s diagnostic predicament and modern literature s most daring experiments
