World Lexicon Of Grammaticalization:

World Lexicon of Grammaticalization Bernd Heine, Tania Kuteva, 2002-03-14 This 2002 book summarizes the most salient generalizations that have been made on grammatical forms and constructions World Lexicon of Grammaticalization Bernd Heine, 2001 World Lexicon of Grammaticalization Bernd Heine, Tania Kuteva, 2002 While the comparative method is concerned with regularities in phonological change grammaticalization theory deals with regularities of grammatical change In an A Z format this book summarizes the most salient generalizations that have been made on the unidirectional change of grammatical forms and constructions The product of ten years of research World Lexicon of Grammaticalization provides the reader with the tools to show how different grammatical meanings can be related to one another in a principled way how to deal with issues such as polysemy and heterosemy or why certain linguistic forms have simultaneous lexical and grammatical functions It covers several hundred grammaticalization processes in each case offering definitions of lexical concepts suitable examples from a variety of languages and references to the relevant research literature Indices organized by source and target concepts allow for flexible use and the findings delineated in the book are relevant to students of language across theoretical boundaries Linguistic Diversity and Language Theories Zygmunt Frajzyngier, Adam Hodges, David S. Rood, 2005-01-01 From the refinement of general methodology to new insights of synchronic and diachronic universals to studies of specific phenomena this collection demonstrates the crucial role that language data play in the evolution of useful accurate linguistic theories Issues addressed include the determination of meaning in typological studies a refined understanding of diachronic processes by including intentional social statistical and level determined phenomena the reconsideration of categories such as sentence evidential or adposition and structures such as compounds or polysynthesis the tension between formal simplicity and functional clarity the inclusion of unusual systems in theoretical debates and fresh approaches to Chinese classifiers possession in Oceanic languages and English aspect This is a careful selection of papers presented at the International Symposium on Linguistic Diversity and Language Theories in Boulder Colorado The purpose of the Symposium was to confront fundamental issues in language structure and change with the rich variation of forms and functions observed across languages Up and down the Cline □ The Nature of Grammaticalization Olga Fischer, Muriel Norde, Harry Perridon, 2004-05-28 The basic idea behind this volume is to probe the nature of grammaticalization Its contributions focus on the following questions i In how far can grammaticalization be considered a universal diachronic process or mechanism of change and in how far is it conditioned by synchronic factors ii What is the role of the speaker in grammaticalization iii Does grammaticalization itself provide a cause for change or is it an epiphenomenon i e a conglomeration of causal factors mechanisms which elsewhere occur independently iv If it is epiphenominal how do we explain that similar pathways so often occur in known cases of grammaticalization v Is grammaticalization unidirectional vi What is the nature of the parameters guiding grammaticalization The overall aim of the book is to enrich our understanding of what grammaticalization does or does not entail via detailed case studies in combination with theoretical and methodological discussions

Linguistic Universals and Language Change Jeff Good, 2008-01-25 This book looks at the relationship between linguistic universals and language change Reflecting the resurgence of work in both fields over the last two decades it addresses two related issues of central importance in linguistics the balance between synchronic and diachronic factors in accounting for universals of linguistic structure and the means of distinguishing genuine aspects of a universal human cognitive capacity for language from regularities that may be traced to extraneous origins The volume brings together specially commissioned work by leading scholars including prominent representatives of generative and functional linguistics It examines rival explanations for linguistic universals and assesses the effectiveness of competing models of language change The authors investigate patterns and processes of grammatical and lexical change across a wide range of languages they consider the degree to which common characteristics condition processes of change in related languages and examine how far differences in linguistic outcomes may be explained by cultural or external factors This book will interest the wide range of scholars in linguistics and related fields concerned with language change historical linguistics linguistic typology and universals and the nature of the human language faculty

Negation in the world's languages I Matti Miestamo, Ljuba Veselinova, 2026-01-15 The three volume work Negation in the world's languages constitutes a major step forward in the comparative study of negation It includes 43 chapters describing the negation system of one language each following a typologically and functionally oriented questionnaire The questionnaire is a comparative tool organized according to functional subdomains of negation It highlights aspects of negation that have been found salient in typological research such as standard negation negation in non declaratives negation of stative predications and negative indefinite pronouns At the same time it aims at a comprehensive coverage of the domain of negation and also allows room for language specific features to be highlighted By using the questionnaire the chapters have produced comparable datasets of the negation systems of a wide variety of languages from different families and areas The contributions are also good examples of the fruitful cooperation between typologists and descriptive linguists in the context of diversity linguistics On the one hand typological knowledge is essential for language description as it helps descriptive linguists see their data in a broader perspective ask new questions and come up with new analyses On the other hand typologists are crucially dependent on work done by descriptive linguists for their data collection The selection of languages is mainly a result of the response to an open call for papers originally launched for the workshop on negation organized in connection with the Syntax of the World's Languages VIII conference in Paris in 2018 To balance the representation of different continents authors working on languages from the areas that were initially least covered were invited to take part The languages are distributed across the three volumes according to geography following the macroareal divisions in the Glottolog The first volume includes languages from Africa the second one covers languages from Eurasia and the third one brings together languages from

Papunesia Australia North America and South America This book is complemented by volume II available at <https://langsci.press.org/catalog/book/496> and volume III available at <https://langsci.press.org/catalog/book/497> Negation in the world's languages I : Africa Matti Miestamo, Ljuba Veselinova, Héloïse Calame, 2026-02-19 The three volume work Negation in the world's languages constitutes a major step forward in the comparative study of negation It includes 43 chapters describing the negation system of one language each following a typologically and functionally oriented questionnaire The questionnaire is a comparative tool organized according to functional subdomains of negation It highlights aspects of negation that have been found salient in typological research such as standard negation negation in non declaratives negation of stative predications and negative indefinite pronouns At the same time it aims at a comprehensive coverage of the domain of negation and also allows room for language specific features to be highlighted By using the questionnaire the chapters have produced comparable datasets of the negation systems of a wide variety of languages from different families and areas The contributions are also good examples of the fruitful cooperation between typologists and descriptive linguists in the context of diversity linguistics On the one hand typological knowledge is essential for language description as it helps descriptive linguists see their data in a broader perspective ask new questions and come up with new analyses On the other hand typologists are crucially dependent on work done by descriptive linguists for their data collection The selection of languages is mainly a result of the response to an open call for papers originally launched for the workshop on negation organized in connection with the Syntax of the World's Languages VIII conference in Paris in 2018 To balance the representation of different continents authors working on languages from the areas that were initially least covered were invited to take part The languages are distributed across the three volumes according to geography following the macroareal divisions in the Glottolog The first volume includes languages from Africa the second one covers languages from Eurasia and the third one brings together languages from Papunesia Australia North America and South America This book is complemented by volume II available at <https://langsci.press.org/catalog/book/496> and volume III available at <https://langsci.press.org/catalog/book/497>

Non-verbal Predication in the World's Languages Pier Marco Bertinetto, Luca Ciucci, Denis Creissels, 2025-08-18 The notion of predication is usually associated with the lexical class of verbs However the predicate function may also be expressed by Noun Adjective Adverb Quantifier Phrases a John is a doctor b The man is old c The boys are in the garden d Sam's friends are many Natural languages do with respect to non verbal predication what they are expected to do in any compartment of grammar they sharply diverge in their behavior This book offers a wide typological overview of how languages deal with non verbal predication henceforth NVP After the pioneering works by Hengeveld 1992 and Stassen 1997 no other work has attempted to provide a comprehensive overview of this pervasive syntactic phenomenon Hence the need for this book The introductory chapter highlights the main features to be considered the lexical and morphosyntactic nature of the predicate the morphological expression of NVP the semantic types of NVP The bulk of the book consists of a collection of papers written by well known specialists targeting different languages or language families thus offering a rich array of typological data This book will be of interest to typologists syntacticians of any theoretical creed and students of linguistics at large Reflexive constructions in the world's languages Katarzyna Janic,Nicoletta Puddu,Martin Haspelmath ,2023-07-11 This landmark publication brings together 28 papers on reflexive constructions in languages from all continents representing very diverse language types While reflexive constructions have been discussed in the past from a variety of angles this is the first edited volume of its kind All the chapters are based on original data and they are broadly comparable through a common terminological framework The volume opens with two introductory chapters by the editors that set the stage and lay out the main comparative concepts and it concludes with a chapter presenting generalizations on the basis of the studies of individual languages □□□□ ,2013-12 The Encyclopedia of Language and Linguistics: Gen-Int ,2006 □□□□□□ ,2014 Journal of Linguistics ,2015 General Linguistics ,2003 Studies in Language ,2009 Language George Melville Bolling,Bernard Bloch,2008 A Grammar of Vurës, Vanuatu Catriona Malau,2016 This book is a comprehensive grammatical description of the Vur s language spoken on the island of Vanua Lava in the Banks group of islands northern Vanuatu Vur s is a previously undescribed language with very few minor published works referring to the language Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts ,2007 Contact-induced Word Order Change Without Word Order Change Bernd Heine,2006
