Sourcebook for Classical Rhetoric John Tomarchio,2023-09-22 This Sourcebook is intended for students of liberal arts and great books It treats such books as primary sources for inquiring into the nature of human speech because they clarify the terms and stakes of perennial questions thinking human beings ask themselves about persuasive speaking By crystallizing viable claims about the nature of what we confront in politics and society live claims for us to confront in our own with the stakes of that confrontation being live as well they originate a dialectic with one another and with us their readers Cicero called rhetoric a liberal art necessary for every citizen of a free republic In the polities of ancient Greece and Rome rhetoric was politically potent because oratory was the regular means of political decision Words were decisive often a matter of life and death not merely for individuals but for peoples In human milieux where human speech is so politically decisive reflection upon its nature became keen The selections of this sourcebook have been arranged in three sequences The first two sequences comprise philosophical dialogues on the ends of rhetoric Selections from Plato s Gorgias Phaedrus and Apology examine the rhetorician or teacher of rhetoric and then Cicero s De oratore offers us a dialectic among practitioners about its practice The philosophical dialogues on the art s intended ends and causative effects provide the theoretical and ethical context for examining its means These philosophical dialogues are thus propaedeutic to the third sequence which focusses on the art itself with selections from Aristotle s treatise On Rhetoric paired with orations from Thucydides History of the Peloponnesian War

Out of Style Paul Butler, 2008-01-31

Paul Butler applauds the emerging interest in the study of style among scholars of rhetoric and composition arguing that the loss of stylistics from composition in recent decades left it alive only in the popular imagination as a set of grammar conventions Butler's goal in Out of Style is to articulate style as a vital and productive source of invention and to redefine its importance for current research theory and pedagogy Scholars in composition know that the ideas about writing most common in the discourse of public intellectuals are egregiously backward Without a vital approach to stylistics Butler argues writing studies will never dislodge the controlling fantasies of self authorized pundits in the nation's intellectual press Rhetoric and composition must answer with a public discourse that is responsive to readers ongoing interest in style but is also grounded in composition theory

Rhetorical Traditions and the Teaching of Writing C. H. Knoblauch, Lil Brannon, 1984 The argument of this book is that the earliest tradition of Western rhetoric the classical perspective of Aristotle and Cicero continues to have the greatest impact on writing instruction albeit an unconscious impact This occurs despite the fact that modern rhetoric no longer accepts either the views of mind language and world underlying ancient theory or the concepts about discourse knowledge and communication presented in that theory As a result teachers are depending on ideas as outmoded as they are unreflectively accepted Knoblauch and Brannon maintain that the two traditions are fundamentally incompatible in their assumptions and concepts so that writing teachers must make choices between them if their teaching is to be purposeful and consistent They suggest that the modern tradition offers a richer basis for instruction and they show what teaching from that perspective looks like and how it differs from traditional teaching The Rhetoric of Nineteenth-century Reform Martha S. Watson, Thomas R. Burkholder, 2008 How Social Darwinism permeated the public discourse of America's Gilded Age

Style in Rhetoric and Composition Paul Butler, 2009-03-16 Style in Rhetoric and Composition gathers essays that trace the evolution of the study of style and illustrates the debates that continue to shape style pedagogies within the field of rhetoric and composition Selections encompass works by classical rhetoricians and modern compositionists alike addressing a range of issues that includes grammar in style sentence based pedagogies imitation and alternative rhetorics
