Negotiating Boundaries of Southern Womanhood Janet L. Coryell,2000 In eleven thought provoking essays covering the early nineteenth through the early twentieth centuries Negotiating Boundaries of Southern Womanhood examines the complex intersections of race class and gender and the ways in which southern women dealt with the powers that be and in some instances became those powers Elitism status and class were always filtered through a prism of race and gender in the South and women of both races played an important role in maintaining as well as challenging the hierarchies that existed to claim a share of power for themselves in a male dominated world Copyright Libri GmbH All rights reserved     The Prime of Life Steven Mintz,2015-04-07 Steven Mintz reconstructs the emotional interior of a life stage too often relegated to self help books and domestic melodramas He describes the challenges of adulthood today and puts them into perspective by exploring how past generations achieved intimacy and connection raised children sought meaning in work and responded to loss     The Southern Register ,2006     South Carolina Women Marjorie Julian Spruill,Valinda W. Littlefield,Joan Marie Johnson,2010-01-25 The biographical essays in this volume provide new insights into the various ways that South Carolina women asserted themselves in their state and illuminate the tension between tradition and change that defined the South from the Civil War through the Progressive Era As old rules including gender conventions that severely constrained southern women were dramatically bent if not broken these women carved out new roles for themselves and others The volume begins with a profile of Laura Towne and Ellen Murray who founded the Penn School on St Helena Island for former slaves. Subsequent essays look at such women as the five Rollin sisters, members of a prominent black family who became passionate advocates for women's rights during Reconstruction; writer Josephine Pinckney who helped preserve African American spirituals and explored conflicts between the New and Old South in her essays and novels; and Dr. Matilda Evans, the first African American woman licensed to practice medicine in the state. Intractable racial attitudes often caused women to follow separate but parallel paths, as with Louisa B. Poppenheim and Marion B. Wilkinson. Poppenheim, who was white, and Wilkinson, who was black, were both driving forces in the women's club movement. Both saw clubs as a way not only to help women and children but also to showcase these positive changes to the wider nation. Yet the two women worked separately, as did the white and black state federations of women's clubs. Often mixing deference with daring, these women helped shape their society through such avenues as education, religion, politics, community organizing, history, the arts, science, and medicine. Women in the mid and late twentieth century would build on their accomplishments.

Entering the Fray Jonathan Daniel Wells, Sheila R. Phipps, 2009-12-01. The study of the New South has in recent decades been greatly enriched by research into gender, reshaping our understanding of the struggle for woman suffrage, the conflicted nature of race and class in the South, the complex story of politics and the role of family and motherhood in black and white society. This book brings together nine essays that examine the importance of gender, race, and culture in the New South, offering a rich and varied analysis of the multifaceted role of gender in the lives of black and white southerners in the troubled decades of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Ranging widely from conservative activism by white women in 1920s Georgia to political involvement by black women in 1950s Memphis, many of these essays focus on southern women's increasing public activities and high profile images in the twentieth century. They tell how women shouldered responsibilities for local, national, and international interests, but just as nineteenth century women's status could be at risk from too much public presence, women of the New South stepped gingerly into the public arena, taking care to work within what they considered their current gender limitations. The authors, both established and up-and-coming scholars, take on subjects that reflect wide-ranging, sophisticated, and diverse scholarship on black and white women in the New South. They include the efforts of female Home Demonstration Agents to defeat debilitating diseases in rural Florida and the increasing participation of women in historic preservation at Monticello. They also reflect unique personal stories as diverse as lobbyist Kathryn Dunaway's efforts to defeat the Equal Rights Amendment in Georgia and Susan Smith's depiction by the national media as a racist southerner during coverage of her children's deaths. Taken together, these nine essays contribute to the picture of women increasing their movement into political and economic life while all too often still maintaining their gendered place as determined by society. Their rich insights provide new ways to consider the meaning and role of gender in the post-Civil War South.
