

1 Signalling System No.7

Signalling System No.7 (SS7) is designed to meet the challenges of high-speed data networks. The system is designed to control not only the call setups but also non-speech services. SS7 is a multifunctional modular system and is suitable for various applications of telecommunication networks (analog, digital telephone network, mobile telephone network and circuit switched data network, etc.).

According to the basic architecture of ITU-T Signalling System No.7, the whole signalling system mainly includes Message Transfer Part (MTP), Signalling Connection and Control Part (SCCP), Telephone User Part (TUP), ISDN User Part (ISUP) and Transaction Capability Application Part (TCAP).

To meet the requirements of diversified services, Mobile Application Part (MAP), BSS Application Part (BSSAP) and CAMEL Application Part (CAP) are also developed. Their architecture and division of functions is closely related to the Open System Interconnection (OSI) 7-layer reference model.

1.1 Message Transfer Part (MTP)

The main function of MTP is to ensure reliable signalling message transfer in the signalling network. In case of system and/or signalling network faults, it can take measures to avoid or reduce the loss, repetition and loss of order of messages.

MTP comprises three functional levels, including Signalling Data Link Function, Signalling Link Function and Signalling Network Function.
