That Philadelphia Girl:

Why Girls Fight Cindy D. Ness, 2010-08 VIOLENCE IN SOCIETY In low income US cities street fights between teenage girls are common These fights take place at school on street corners or in parks when one girl provokes another to the point that she must either step up or be labelled a punk Typically when girls engage in violence that is not strictly self defence they are labelled delinquent their actions taken as a sign of emotional pathology However Cindy D Ness demonstrates that in poor urban areas this kind of street fighting is seen as a normal part of girlhood and a necessary way to earn respect among peers as well as a way for girls to attain a sense of mastery and self esteem in a social setting where legal opportunities for achievement are not otherwise easily available Ness sheds new light on the everyday street fighting of urban girls arguing that different cultural standards associated with race and class influence the relationship that girls have to physical aggression

Girl's Schooling During The Progressive Era Karen Graves, 2014-06-03 This work traces the impact of a differentiated curriculum on girls education in St Louis public schools from 1870 to 1930 Its central argument is that the premise upon which a differentiated curriculum is founded that schooling ought to differ among students in order prepare each for his or her place in the social order actually led to academic decline The attention given to the intersection of gender race and social class and its combined effect on girls schooling places this text in the new wave of critical historical scholarship in the field of educational research
