A New Geological Map of the Island of Syros (Aegean Sea, Greece) Mark Keiter, Chris Ballhaus, Frank Tomaschek, 2011 The Island of Syros Cyclades Greece is a prime locality for the study of processes active in deep levels of orogens and is world famous for its exceptionally well preserved blueschist to eclogite facies lithologies Syros Island was completely remapped at a scale of 1:25 000 Detailed lithostratigraphical observations and area wide closely spaced structural measurements allowed a much more detailed depiction of the highly variable lithological assemblage as well as of the complex structural evolution Lithostratigraphical indications such as the distribution of Mn mineralization and sequential repetition of characteristic marker successions suggest that the whole rock pile of the Cycladic Blueschist Unit on Syros including meta ophiolites and metasediments retains numerous primary depositional features Magmatic activity in an Upper Cretaceous backarc environment was likely to be contemporaneous with the deposition of the sedimentary protoliths comprising the main lithological succession on Syros The structural evolution of the Cycladic Blueschist Unit on Syros comprises multiphase isoclinal intrafolial folding and ductile thrusting regarded as essentially burial related and terminating close to peak metamorphic conditions either prograde or very early on the retrograde path Especially in areas where blueschist to eclogite facies metamorphism is undisturbed high pressure fabrics are well preserved The retrograde evolution was accompanied by heterogeneously distributed weakly developed extensional tectonics and episodic contractional deformation followed by intense brittle transpressional and transtensional tectonics disrupting the rock sequence since Miocene to subrecent times

Interhemispheric Water Exchange in the Atlantic Ocean G.J. Goni, P. M. Rizzoli, 2003-11-12 Recent results from modeling and observational studies demonstrate that the tropical Atlantic is a critical region for processes that maintain the meridional overturning circulation such as cross equatorial exchanges and for sea surface temperature variability that impacts on climate variability of the coupled tropical ocean atmosphere system The theme of this book is the inter hemispheric and inter gyre exchanges of heat salt and fresh water while its goal is to improve the knowledge of the tropical Atlantic dynamics and how it affects the global ocean A clear understanding of the dynamics of processes that affect the flow of mass and heat between the southern and the northern hemispheres in the upper few hundred meters in the tropical

Atlantic and of those associated to the ocean circulation or to surface signals from decadal inter annual to mesoscale periods becomes necessary to better evaluate their contribution to the interhemispheric mass exchange These processes are believed to be largely responsible in driving the sea surface temperature which in turn is a critical parameter to investigate ocean atmospheric interactions Output produced by regional models is also used to complement the observations and to provide additional information on their spatial and temporal variability The subtropical cells by bringing water masses subducted in the subtropics to the equator and zonal currents investigated here contribute to the interhemispheric water exchange Special attention is also given to the warm and salty anticyclonic rings shed by the North Brazil Current which are now known to have a much broader impact not only on interhemispheric water mass transfer but also on the environment of remote regions Observations from different sources are blended together are used to validate model outputs and are also assimilated into models to obtain a more complete and accurate picture of the oceanic circulation and of its time evolution Family

The Socioeconomic Dynamics of Settling Down Gary M. Feinman ,Victor D. Thompson,2025-10-09 The foundation of larger and more permanent communities and the cooperative nature of this process of sedentism was one of the most consequential transitions in human history Decades of archaeological research across the globe now indicate clearly that this process was not necessarily tied to a greater reliance on domesticated resources nor was it generally linked to a cessation of individual or household mobility For this reason the process of establishing larger and denser networks of social interaction was not necessarily unidirectional irreversible nor driven strictly by resource availability The process was highly social and the long term sustainability of these denser social aggregations and networks co occurred with the advent of new institutions and affiliations that often served to solidify the expanded interpersonal ties engendered by novel and more populated social contexts Yet consequentially the institutions modes of leadership affiliations and behaviors associated with settling down were markedly variable across time and space with variance often tied to the hereditability concentration and distribution of the resources that sustained and financed these communities and their institutional components Resources and power were distributed to different degrees and were often situational Here we highlight and endeavor to account for variability in the tempo and timing of this process as well as the diverse paths that were taken in this key transformational episode in which the modes and scale of human cooperation often were reconfigured H.O.
