South Norway:

Fennoscandian Tundra Ecosystems P. Kallio, Frans Emil Wielgolaski, T. Rosswall, 2012-12-06 The term Fennoscandia is used to denote Finland and the Scandinavian peninsula which comprises Norway and Sweden and sometimes also neighbouring districts of the USSR The western part of the Scandinavian peninsula is mountainous with peaks mostly within the range 1000-2000 m above sea level Permafrost is not usually found in the southern districts of these alpine zones but occurs in the northeastern part of Fennoscandia in mire even at a low elevation If tundra is defined as areas of permafrost only very limited regions of Fennoscandia could be included However in the present volumes we have used the word tundra in a broader sense as approximating areas with mean annual air temperature below 0°C at meteorological standard height 1.5-2 m it is often used in this sense in North America This usage allows all alpine zones to be included along with the subalpine birch zone and certain open subarctic woodland forest tundra in Russian usage An Urban Future for Sápmi? Mikkel Berg-Nordlie, Astri Dankertsen, Marte Winsvold, 2022-01-14 Presenting the political and cultural processes that occur within the indigenous Sámi people of North Europe as they undergo urbanization this book examines how they have retained their sense of history and culture in this new setting The book presents data and analysis on subjects such as indigenous urbanization history urban indigenous identity issues urban indigenous youth and the governance of urban spaces for indigenous culture and community The book is written by a team of researchers mostly Sámi from all the countries covered in the book

U.S. Geological Survey Circular, 1984 Petroleum Geochemistry in Exploration of the Norwegian Shelf Norwegian Petroleum Society, 2012-12-06 This volume is the record of a three day symposium entitled Organic Geochemistry in Exploration of the Norwegian Shelf which was sponsored by the Norwegian Petroleum Society Norsk Petroleumsforening and held at the Rogaland Regional College Stavanger on 22-24 October 1984 Twenty nine papers were presented and all but one are published in full herein The aim of the conference was to focus on the application of geochemical methods to the current and highly active exploration of the Norwegian offshore Emphasis was on practical interpretation and case histories rather than laboratory methods and techniques and a strong attendance was sought among geologists and seismic interpreters active in exploration in Norway and Northwest Europe generally On all counts the symposium was a great success with a total of 213 participants registered In his opening address Mr Egil Bergsager director of the Norwegian Petroleum Directorate observed that during the 1970s petroleum geochemistry emerged from being a somewhat academic pursuit into a practical aid in exploration for hydrocarbons This first stage when many of the basic methods were developed has now led in the 1980s to an expansion into applications in regional geological studies including mathematical modelling of thermal history hydrocarbon migration and basin development
