Integration of Perception and Action Robert Ward, 2002 The remarkable complexity and sophistication of our perceptual systems have evolved for ultimately one purpose to promote efficient and effective action within a constantly changing environment Traditionally the route from perception to action has often been viewed as a single one directional sequence of stages which begins with a stimulus presentation and ends with a response This view has tended to emphasize the separation of perception from action with the result that studies of stimulus and response processing have often been carried out in isolation from each other The work in this issue takes a different approach which reflects renewed and increasing interest in how cognitive systems for vision and action are integrated The studies here explore multiple pathways between vision and action the ways in which vision promotes action and even the conditions and degree to which action and its consequences can influence vision A variety of methods and theoretical approaches are represented in studies examining spatial coding object processing motor behaviour attentional bias and codes for action
