Robert R. Redfield

Summer Dance:

Summer Dance Lynn Swanson, 2011-10-21 A Moonbeam Children's Book Awards winner Suggested for readers ages 10 to 13 Sara is thirteen and in the northern Michigan woods at Lakewood Dance Camp where she is excited scared and challenged by class auditions rehearsals and performances of authentic ballets She just HAS to win one of the three scholarships for the next summer so she can continue her training or there's no chance of returning She is determined to be a REAL dancer in a REAL company some day But how can she look good enough to win a scholarship when she has to learn new forms of dance try to figure out what Madame is saying with her Russian accent dance all day long and stay out of trouble Robin keeps getting in her way messing up rehearsals blaming her for a sprained foot and for problems with the boys across the lake Even her new friend Erin seems more interested in having fun sometimes than taking their classes and rehearsals seriously When dancers from The San Francisco Ballet make a visit and perform for the young dancers Sara is even more inspired Taking a master class with Yuri from the company is awesome and watching them perform Swan Lake is so romantic But it could all be ruined by not keeping up in class by getting caught looking into a secret practice room in the basement of the dance studio or being caught off limits on the boys side of the lake in the mysterious cabin in the woods Sara wants more than anything to sing the Lakewood song on stage after the final performance with a scholarship in hand but she has trouble even making up a dance for the student concert where the boys will be the audience If that isn't problem enough she is paired with Robin for the final dance performance and they just can't get it together Instead of making everything worse Sara needs to find a way to bring teamwork and success A glossary of dance and theater terms is included along with a What Do You Think discussion section at the end of the book

May It Fill Your Soul Timothy Rice, 1994-07-13 In this vivid musical ethnography Timothy Rice documents and interprets the history of folk music song and dance in Bulgaria over a seventy year period of dramatic change From 1920 to 1989 Bulgaria changed from a nearly medieval village society to a Stalinist planned industrial economy to a chaotic mix of capitalist and socialist markets and cultures In the context of this history Rice brings Bulgarian folk music to life by focusing on the biography of the Varimezov family including the musician Kostadin and his wife Todora a singer Combining interviews with his own experiences of learning how to play sing and dance Bulgarian folk music Rice presents one of the most detailed accounts of traditional aural learning processes in the ethnomusicological literature Using a combination of traditionally dichotomous musicological and ethnographic approaches Rice tells the story of how individual musicians learned their tradition how they lived it during the pre Communist era of family farming how the tradition changed with industrialization brought under Communism and finally how it flourished and evolved in the recent unstable political climate This work complete with a compact disc and numerous illustrations and musical examples contributes not only to ethnomusicological theory and method but also to our understanding of Slavic folklore Eastern European anthropology and cultural processes in Socialist states

What High Schools Don't Tell You

(And Other Parents Don't Want You to Know) Elizabeth Wissner-Gross,2008-06-24 From the author of What Colleges Don't Tell You a plan to help parents of middle and early high school students prepare their kids for the best colleges In order to succeed in the fiercely competitive college admissions game you need a game plan and you have to start young In this empowering guide Elizabeth Wissner Gross a nationally sought after college packager helps parents of seventh to tenth graders create a long term plan that come senior year will allow their kids to virtually write their own ticket into their choice of schools Parents should start by helping their kids identify their academic passions then design a four year strategy based on those interests The book details hundreds of opportunities available to make kids stand out that most high school guidance counselors and teachers simply don't know about or don't think to share This indispensable guide should be required reading for any parent whose child dreams of attending one of the country's top colleges Glen Echo Park ,1983
