Violence And Victims:

Victims of Crime Robert C. Davis, Arthur J. Lurigio, Susan Herman, 2012-09-21 The Fourth Edition of this widely used and respected book has been thoroughly revised and updated to include newly contributed and updated articles utilizing the latest research and studies in the areas of violence abuse and victims rights from experts in the field It has a stronger focus on emerging issues and policies in the field of victimology than other comparable texts and offer the most current research thinking and best practices regarding crime victims and crime victim services Using an engaging and comprehensible format editors Robert C Davis Arthur J Lurigio and Susan Herman provide a synopsis of the contemporary literature and debates on significant topics in the field of criminal victimization Understanding Victims of Interpersonal Violence Veronique N. Valliere, 2019-11-21 Understanding Victims of Interpersonal Violence A Guide for Investigators and Prosecutors provides accessible information for criminal justice personnel in the trenches with victims of violence to aid in understanding and explaining their behavior This guide sheds light on interpersonal violence victims decisions and actions by providing context and naming factors that commonly impact victim responses These include internal factors such as culture religion shame and personality as well as external factors like access to services support systems and resources These factors inhibit or facilitate responses like disclosure resistance and participation or lack thereof in the prosecution of the offenders This book also explores the influence of the perpetrator as well as more deeply examining victim responses that typically offer challenges to investigators and prosecutors for example continued contact with the offender lack of resistance and issues in disclosure Finally the guide provides concrete tools to assist investigators in interviewing and for prosecutors to use during the prosecutorial process This book is designed for investigators prosecutors advocates criminal justice practitioners and students of these subjects Manual of Forensic Emergency Medicine Ralph Riviello, 2010 Manual of Forensic Emergency Medicine is a comprehensive guide to the clinical approach to criminal illness and injury This resource offers emergency care professionals the knowledge needed to make an accurate diagnosis of abuse neglect sexual assault or other conditions in which forensic investigation is needed This book offers information on victim services and resources available for patients as well as relevant aspects of the legal system This essential guide contains color photos a forensic glossary and forensic forms that can be used in a clinical practice Key Topics include Forensic Documentation Firearms Evidence Collection in the ED and Gang Violence Understanding Victims' Use of Formal Services After Violence Keith Hullenaar, 2021 Violence has detrimental and long lasting effects on victims physical health emotional well being and social relationships Formal services such as law enforcement health services and victim service agencies provide victims a means to mitigate these harms but not all victims use them This dissertation seeks to understand and predict these help seeking outcomes Building on the theoretical principles of rational choice theory I offer a needs barriers framework to explain why victims may use or avoid formal services after a crime This framework rests on two parsimonious assumptions 1 Victims use a formal service when they perceive that it can satisfy one or more of their physiological safety related psychological or social needs and 2

Perceived physical psychological and social barriers serve as disincentives for victims to use formal services I argue that this approach provides insight into how the sequelae of violence e g physical emotional social harms and the situational factors of victimization e g victim offender relationship and sexual violence interact to influence whether and how victims utilize formal services after a crime Using violent victimization data collected by the National Crime Victimization Survey 2008 2018 this dissertation provides two studies that examined the scope of violence harms and how these harms and certain situational factors of violence influence victims formal help seeking outcomes The first study examines the short and long term physical emotional and social harms of violent victimization The findings suggest that injury severity and victim offender relationship are key risk factors of harm but in unique ways Victims who reported a greater degree of injury and a closer relationship with their offender had worse physical emotional and social outcomes These victims were also more likely to report long term physical and psychological symptoms months after the crime occurred However the link between injury severity and these other sequelae of violence depended on the victim offender relationship Specifically the degree of injury had a significantly weaker effect on the emotional social and long term consequences of victimization when the attacker was a family intimate partner than when the offender was a stranger The second study investigates violence victims use of formal services after the crime including police medical and victim services Overall victims used formal services in roughly half of the violent victimizations with police services being the most common 94% of incidents involving a formal service Consistent with the needs barriers framework the physical emotional and social harms of violence were strong and consistent predictors of whether violence victims reported to the police sought medical care or contacted victim service agencies after the crime However the results regarding victim offender relationship were mixed Victims were generally most likely to use formal services when the offender was a family member intimate partner or a stranger instead of an acquaintance In analyses of victims use of follow up emotional care months after the crime victims were most likely to use formal services when the offender was a family member intimate partner Similar to the previous study the link between the harms of violence and victims use of formal services was partly conditioned by the victim offender relationship Injury severity and social distress had a weaker relationship to victims use of formal services when the offender was a family member intimate partner than when the offender was a stranger However in analyses of victims use of follow up care this interaction was not significant Violence victims formal help seeking outcomes result from a complex interplay between their needs for formal services and the barriers they face in accessing them A needs barriers framework lends insight into the unique ways commonly studied measures of violence e g injury severity and victim offender relationship influence victims help seeking outcomes
