Violence Of Men:

Young People's Understandings of Men's Violence Against Women Nancy Lombard, 2016-03-09 Globally nationally and locally men's violence against women is an endemic social problem and an enduring human rights issue Unlike men who are most likely to be victims of stranger assaults and violence official data shows that women are most likely to be attacked beaten raped and killed by men known to them either partners or family members Research has maintained that to challenge and prevent men's violence against women changing the attitudes and behaviour of young people is essential This ground breaking book presents the first investigation into what younger people think about men's violence against women It does this by locating their constructions and understandings within the temporal and spatial location of childhood Through challenging the perception that young people are too young to know about violence or to offer opinions on it Nancy Lombard demonstrates the ways to talk to younger people about men's violence Through confronting preconceptions of younger people's existing knowledge capabilities and understanding she demonstrates that this is a subject which young people can confidently discuss

What Causes Men's Violence Against Women? Michele Harway, James M. O'Neil, 1999-09-09 Carefully organized and tightly edited this insightful book considers potential causes of men's violence against women utilizing a variety of theoretical perspectives It summarizes what is known about the multiple causes of men's violence against women and the importance of identifying men's risk factors in order to prevent future violence The editors approach is unique but systematic In chapter 2 the editors present a preliminary multivariate model that explains men's violence against women by identifying four content areas macrosocietal biological gender role socialization and relation factors Within these four areas the editors develop thirteen preliminary hypotheses about the causes of men's violence against women In the subsequent chapters the contributing authors critique or react to specific parts of the multivariate model and address one or more of the 13 hypotheses in the presentation of their own ideas about the causes of men's violence against women In the concluding chapter the editors summarize the contributors reactions to the original hypotheses by creating a revised multivariate model of risk factors for men's violence against women The final model includes biological socialization psychological psychosocial relational and macrosocietal factors Furthermore the model is explained through 13 theoretical propositions 40 research hypotheses and over 60 risk variables related to men's violence against women The book closes with a discussion of men's protective resiliency and vulnerability factors as well as future directions for theory development advocacy and the prevention of violence against women

Violent Men, Violent Couples Anson D. Shupe, William A. Stacey, Lonnie R. Hazlewood, 1987 This book profiles the characteristics and causes of violence between husbands and wives then describes a systems approach for counselling spouse abusers The research is based on a sample of 241 known violent men supplemented with information on 542 others The analysis considers the men's motives their social circumstances their demography and their feelings about the victims and their own violence Similar information obtained from a literature review is presented for violent wives Among the causative factors identified are stress previous learning and traumatic childhood experiences The study illuminates the culture of male violence exploring why violence in active military families is three times as severe as that in civilian families and the fact that religion is an underused resource for addressing the problem The systems approach to counselling spouse abusers focuses on both persons in a violent relationship and emphasizes multiple causes The treatment mode is matched to the severity and extent of violence as well as the context in which the violence occurs NCJRS modified

Men's Rights, Gender, and Social Media Christa Hodapp,2017-09-05 This work examines the contemporary men's rights movement MRM a mainly online movement that claims men are oppressed by gender norms women and feminism While some feminists and other progressives have dismissed the movement as simple misogyny this book argues that the MRM expresses a growing cultural trend in male anger and frustration and is an extreme manifestation of what has been previously referred to as a masculinity crisis In order to assess the implications of the MRM for gender politics this book explores the movement politically investigating the ways in which online communication and media outlets have impacted contemporary meanings of identity gender language and political engagement Furthermore a discussion of various issues promoted by the MRM such as parenting divorce employment and violence provide deeper insights into the issues surrounding masculinity and gender politics in current sociopolitical contexts
