Information Every Woman Should Have Catherine Paris, Life Is Just a Dance! Rita B., 2008-02-13 BOOK
DESCRIPTION Growing up in a small Southern town in the 50s and 60s was to have truly enjoyed the atmosphere of neighborhoods and large family gatherings It was a simpler time when neighbors would get together under the shade trees and visit as they performed daily tasks Children were free to frolic on the grass and build castles in the sand boxes Raising children in the 70s and 80s was a very different experience My husband and I both worked outside the home and our sons became latch key kids The time we did spend together as a family was quality time We worked hard and played hard together We took our two sons everywhere with us on business trips on all vacations and outings They brought so much pleasure to our lives with their imaginations observations and innocence They taught us many lessons of life and I for one am so much wiser having experienced things through their eyes and interpretations During the 90s life seemed harder There was so much to do and so many problems to solve The financial situation of having both sons in college was an eye opener The empty nest was bitter sweet at first However it didnt take long to learn to actually love it But I realized that something was missing from my life It was joy the kind of joy that only children can provide With no hopes of grandchildren in the near future I reached into my memory cache and found myself recalling the wit and wisdom of days gone by from my own childhood and that of my children The new millennium brought opportunities to socialize and to strengthen and build friendships I kept in touch with old friends and developed new friendships through mutual interests organizations and situations Our activities migrated from business meetings and organized social gatherings to dinner parties and girl only get togethers We celebrated birthdays and generally learned how to have fun again It was at a dinner party at a friends home that I was baffled when she posed the question If I were an artichoke plate where would I be Of all the questions I had been asked in my life this truly was the most unusual It was one of those things that comes right out of left field and hits one on the head It is these haphazard mysteries of life that come and go so quickly that if we dont latch on to them they are gone forever The same goes for hidden treasures at Christmas imaginary friends and things considered sacred As we reach middle age things do start to fall apart for some its marriage for some its health and for others its financial Men go through midlife crisis women go through menopause It is easy to get cynical and lose sight of what is important But if we learn to value our friends to have compassion for others and to enjoy the serendipity of each day then Life Is Just a Dance Ebony, 1998-04 EBONY is the flagship magazine of Johnson Publishing Founded in 1945 by John H Johnson it still maintains the highest global circulation of any African American focused magazine [Proceedings of the ...
