Police Women's Empowerment in Ethiopia. Oromia in Perspective Dessalegn Kebede, 2021-04-14 Master's Thesis from the year 2019 in the subject Sociology Relationships and Family grade 3 7 course MBA in management language English abstract Police Women's face multi-faceted challenges to participate in decision-making positions due to different factors. The purpose of this study is to assess police women's empowerment in Ethiopia with emphasis on Oromia regional state police commission. More specifically, it aimed to assess factors affecting police women's empowerment to assume a leadership position. That is aimed to examine gender difference in decision-making positions. To this end, a sample of 160 police women respondents were drawn from the region's police. In order to determine the sample size, probability simple random sampling method was employed. Then, next self-administered questionnaires and interview guides were used to gather data. The data were fed into SPSS version 20.0 followed by analysis and interpretation using descriptive statistics. Law enforcement and order maintenance are generally viewed as the two main duties of the police force. In addition to these two duties, the police are also frequently requested by the public to deliver social services. As one of the law enforcement statutory service teams, the police are expected to provide immediate aid and care to the public along with compulsory regulatory control and defense practices. Provision of public services is one of the most significant roles of the contemporary police. Studies have shown that the police spend most of their time providing police services to the public. Based on the 2007 Law Enforcement Management and Administrative Statistics (LEMAS) report in the United States, the primary function of one-fifth of the police agencies was search and rescue. Specifically, nearly 60 percent of police officers undertook animal control tasks, nearly one-sixth of police agencies were responsible for providing emergency and medical services, and carry out civil defense functions, and about one-tenth of police agencies provided fire prevention services.

Police Women Sandra K. Wells, Betty L. Alt, 2005-09-30 It is often said that a woman must do a job twice as well as a man in order to get half the credit. This is particularly true of women in law enforcement. Women have been involved in various forms of policing for the last 100 years, but it wasn't until the Equal Employment Act of 1970 that women could move from the job of meter maids to patrol and detective work. Yet less than 1% of all top-level cops are women, and there remain significant obstacles in the career paths of women in the force. This book looks at the history of women police officers and provides first-hand accounts of women at every level, including those who drop out. It addresses discrimination, competition, lack of mentoring, differential treatment, and sexual harassment, examining what issues play into the decision to stick it out or leave that many policewomen face. It also considers the family issues these women return home to at the end of the day. It is often said that a woman must do a job twice as well as a man in order to get half the credit. United States With a new vision of non coercive police work and crime prevention Progressive reformers exerted political and social pressure to create positions for female officers dedicated to guiding and protecting juveniles and women Women reformers pointed to changing sexual mores among working class female youth to emphasize the need for a new approach to policing The policewomen who undertook the work of counseling sexually active teenage girls and their families saw themselves as helping young people achieve moral equilibrium during a period in which standards of context were in flux In the Los Angeles Police Department the first to hire women this social work was primarily the responsibility of the City Mother s Bureau in other major cities policewomen s roles were similarly constructed as maternalistic Scrutinizing case records public statements and departmental policies governing policewomen Appier shows how female officers handled the complex gender politics of their work with the public and within their departments Appier reveals that many of these pioneering policewomen succeeded in expanding the scope of policework and carving out a rewarding professional niche despite continued attempts to oust them or limit their sphere of action But this advancement was short lived within a generation a masculinized model of crime fighting took hold and policewomen s authority eroded
