Charles Reade,1882 A Terrible Temptation Charles Reade,2018-01-20 Excerpt from A Terrible Temptation A Story of the Day The morning room of a large house in Portman Square London A gentleman in the prime of life stood with his elbow on the broad mantel piece and made himself agreeable to a young lady seated a little way off playing at work To the ear he was only conversing but his eyes dwelt on her with loving admiration all the time Her posture was favorable to this furtive inspection for she leaned her fair head over her work with a pretty modest demure air that seemed to say I suspect I am being admired I will not look to see I might have to check it The gentleman s features were ordinary except his brow that had power in it but he had the beauty of color his sunburnt features glowed with health and his eye was bright On the whole Rather good looking when he smiled but ugly when he frowned for his frown was a scowl and betrayed a remarkable power of hating About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com
