A Study of Children's Choices in Poetry Helen Katherine Mackintosh, 1924 Theory and Practice of Computation Shin-ya Nishizaki, Masayuki Numao, Jaime Caro, Merlin Suarez, 2019-09-20 This volume contains the papers presented at the 8th Workshop on Computing Theory and Practice WCTP 2018 and is devoted to theoretical and practical approaches to computation. The conference was organized by four top universities in Japan and the Philippines: the Tokyo Institute of Technology, Osaka University, the University of the Philippines Diliman, and De La Salle University. The proceedings provide a broad view of the recent developments in computer science research in Asia with an emphasis on Japan and the Philippines. The papers focus on both theoretical and practical aspects of computations such as programming language theory, modeling of software systems, empathic computing, and various applications of information technology. The book will be of interest to academic and industrial researchers interested in recent developments in computer science research.

Relational Frame Theory Teresa Mulhern, 2022-12-16 Relational Frame Theory: What is it? Why is it important? How can I use it? This book dispels the confusion surrounding Relational Frame Theory and provides an easy-to-understand briefing of Relational Frame Theory and its components with examples to enhance and ease understanding. Recent research has indicated that Relational Frame Theory may form the cornerstone of language and intelligence, and this textbook integrates this information into an easily digestible format, considering the importance of each relational frame from coordination to analogy. Relational Frame Theory provides a potentially useful framework for teaching language and academic skills, and the current textbook provides some examples of how to do this and offers some considerations for future research in this area. This book makes Relational Frame Theory easy to understand and, unlike previous books, assumes no prior knowledge of the theory amongst readers and clarifies some of the jargon used within this body of work. This book provides the most up-to-date outline of previous work within Relational Frame Theory and gives an overview of how this theory could be applied within psychology. To date, no previous book has attempted to integrate research application and an easy-to-understand overview of the theory together; this book aims to integrate all of these aspects into one easily comprehensible guide. The current textbook is aimed towards graduate students and practitioners of applied behavior analysis. Given the proposed changes to the Behavior Analysis Certification Board, which will focus more on Relational Frame Theory than in the past, a book of this nature will be helpful for those pursuing certification and may also be helpful for use within the applied field.

Neural Mechanisms of Perceptual Categorization as Precursors to Speech Perception Einat Liebenthal, Lynne E. Bernstein, 2017-05-03 Perceptual categorization is fundamental to the brain's remarkable ability to process large amounts of sensory information and efficiently recognize objects, including speech. Perceptual categorization is the neural bridge between lower-level sensory and higher-level language processing. A long line of research on the physical properties of the speech signal, as determined by the anatomy and physiology of the speech production apparatus, has led to descriptions of the acoustic information that is used in speech recognition e.g. stop consonants place and manner of articulation voice onset time aspiration Recent research has also considered what visual cues are relevant to visual speech recognition i.e. the visual counter parts used in lipreading or audiovisual speech perception Much of the theoretical work on speech perception was done in the twentieth century without the benefit of neuroimaging technologies and models of neural representation Recent progress in understanding the functional organization of sensory and association cortices based on advances in neuroimaging presents the possibility of achieving a comprehensive and far reaching account of perception in the service of language At the level of cell assemblies research in animals and humans suggests that neurons in the temporal cortex are important for encoding biological categories On the cellular level different classes of neurons interneurons and pyramidal neurons have been suggested to play differential roles in the neural computations underlying auditory and visual categorization The moment is ripe for a research topic focused on neural mechanisms mediating the emergence of speech representations including auditory visual and even somatosensory based forms Important progress can be achieved by juxtaposing within the same research topic the knowledge that currently exists the identified lacunae and the theories that can support future investigations This research topic provides a snapshot and platform for discussion of current understanding of neural mechanisms underlying the formation of perceptual categories and their relationship to language from a multidisciplinary and multisensory perspective It includes contributions reviews original research methodological developments pertaining to the neural substrates dynamics and mechanisms underlying perceptual categorization and their interaction with neural processes governing speech perception
