Thinking About Schools Aimee Howley, Craig Howley, 2012-11-12 As its title implies this book has a deceptively simple mission to prepare would be school leaders to draw upon a variety of theoretical perspectives when thinking about schools and schooling It shows how theories can function as cognitive tools to be mastered carefully stored in one s intellectual toolbox and used to interpret and resolve real world problems Beneath this goal lies the belief that the most effective leaders are those who are able to construct their own well grounded interpretations of events and their own responses to those events Key features of this exciting new text include the following Focus on Alternative Theories The functionalist theoretical views that have dominated administrator preparation programs for the last half century are reviewed early in the book and are shown to be inadequate to the task of understanding and coping with the complex realities of modern day schooling The remainder of the book presents alternative views of schooling that taken together can be thought of as a theoretical repertoire from which to construct interpretations and solutions to everyday real world problems Focus on Diversity Diversity is examined from a variety of viewpoints Chapter 6 looks at the cultural bases of leadership Chapter 7 at comparative and international contexts and Chapter 8 at gender and sexual orientation Illustrative Cases Each chapter contains a case with an embedded dilemma similar to those that real world administrators confront While illustrating the particular theoretical view presented in the chapter these cases are sufficiently complex that they lend themselves to interpretation by any of the other theories considered in the book This book is appropriate for graduate level courses with titles such as Organizational Theory Theory of School Leadership or Introduction to Educational Administration It might also be used as one of several texts in advanced courses on leadership theory Violent Schools, Safe Schools: Report - January 1978 National Institute of Education (U.S.), 1977 Charter Schools as a Faith-Based Initiative: Is This a Possibility? Cecilia R Eaves-Walker M. Eds., 2020-06-26 It is the intent of this independent research project to point out that although society has made a tremendous leap since the 1964 Civil Rights Act we can still do more to bring about a change in the way we view and educate other ethnicities races religions and cultures of which we may have very limited understanding By becoming responsive to these differences such as skin color eye shape speech language or even religious practice we can help create for our students our schools and ourselves a better understanding of educating others who are different This is the root of charter schools This independent research project IRP seeks to address diversity generically as the world of difference as an aspect in educational settings as opposed to our present school s inattentiveness to diversity The New Testament commentary for schools, ed. by C.J. Let's Talk Sense about Our Schools Paul Woodring, 1953 In the controversy over the public schools the vocal partisans of differing viewpoints have increased rather than resolved the public s confusion Let s Talk Sense About Our Schools set out to clear away this confusion by taking a thoughtfully critical look at public education today and searching for those principles which may reasonably guide its future This is not a book of answers but a book for those who seek to find their own answers
