Rodgers,2014-04-16 In addition this third edition includes content on the teaching and learning environment with chapters on learners and methods teachers and methods plus approaches methods and the curriculum The Silent Way - A Method for the German Classroom? Peter Grube,2009-04 Seminar paper from the year 2007 in the subject Didactics English Pedagogy Literature Studies grade 1 0 Martin Luther University Angewandte Anglistik und Amerikanistik course Proseminar Traditional and Alternative Teaching Concepts SS 2007 language English abstract The Silent Way is a teaching method that considers learning to be a conscious cognitive process However the Silent Way tries to involve the whole of the learner considering cognitive and affective aspects That is why Roslyn Young can conclude The Silent Way is usually considered to be one of the alternative or humanistic approaches to language teaching Taking this into consideration the question can be of interest whether the Silent Way is a method which can easily be used at a typical German grammar or comprehensive school. It seems obvious that there are several factors which prevent the method from being applied at German schools other than alternative methods such as Suggestopedia, Superlearning or the Birkenbihl Method cannot find their way into German classrooms either. Sometimes only small parts of the method are applied as in the case of Suggestopedia whose traces can be found in the way some texts are dealt with in modern text books such as the new Green Line books. Therefore this paper will try to see whether the thesis that the Silent Way is not suitable for a typical German classroom will prove to be the result of a superficial prejudice or not. To achieve this aim the paper will give a short overview over the method in a first step. Secondly, some aspects which seem to be important for the role the method could play at German schools will be considered. The roles of learners and teachers and especially the image of the ideal Silent Way learner will be concerned as well as the learning process in its various stages and aspects like group sizes or materials that are needed. The latter do also often prove to be of note in the decision for or against a method at school.

International Journal of Communication, 2006 Teaching by Principles H. Douglas Brown, 1994. The current trend within English teaching in China is for communicative competence that is being able to communicate with linguistic pragmatic discourse and strategic competence. This volume argues that such a theoretical framework of communicative competence needs to be expanded to address both global needs and local contexts if English language teaching in China is to be successful. The contributors to this volume examine every aspect of language teaching and suggest new ways in which communication and grammar can be balanced. The chapters include coverage of the importance of English in a global world, the theoretical framework of communicative competence, the role of grammar in learning English, assessing and evaluating communicative competence, the starting age of learning English, teaching language skills in the post-methods era, using multimedia in teaching and testing, online learning and self-learning, teacher training through empowerment. With its balance of theory and practice and internationally renowned contributors, this guide to new approaches, perspectives and standards in language teaching will be essential reading for academics.
