World Faiths Islam:

Islam and Other Major World Religions Kaiyume Baksh, 2007-08-16 This book is intended for the average reader who would like a general introduction to the world's major religions with an emphasis on Islam. All organized religions assume the existence of God as the Creator of the universe and all things in it. The first chapter, 'Is There a God?', inclines toward this belief and sets the stage for the next five chapters, each on a major world religion. The chapters 'Angels', 'Miracles', and 'Reincarnation' reflect mainly the viewpoints of these religions. The main focus, however, is on Islam. Toward this end, the penultimate chapter, 'Is the Qur'an God's Word?', attempts to answer this question in the affirmative, while the final chapter is devoted to two views within Islam regarding the all-important topic of 'Life after Death'. The first is the majority-held view regarding belief in a soul-body dualism, while the second view holds that there is no soul, only a body. Overall, the intent is to provide a springboard for further reading and discussion by the interested reader.

The World's Religions: Islam Peter Clarke, 2002-06-01 The theological and philosophical bases of the beliefs are clearly presented with their history, development, expression, and everyday practice. It is written by international specialists in a scholarly but non-technical style.

World Religions and Islam Hamid Naseem Rafiabadi, 2003 This book is a collection of valuable articles written by eminent scholars belonging to various religious denominations and researchers and teachers of Islamic studies. The book is also meant to cater to the requirements of the students of comparative religions and Islamology.

Major World Religions Lloyd V. J. Ridgeon, 2003 This book focuses upon those religions that continue to demand the attention of the Western world.

World Religions and Islam Hamid Naseem Rafiabadi, 2003 To define religion is one of the very difficult tasks as every interpreter attempts to give it a subjective twist to suit his individual or community aspirations. However, there have been various definitions provided by scholars to this intricate enterprise. The idea of God formed in one generation by one set of human beings could be meaningless in another. Indeed, the statement 'I believe in God' has no objective meaning as such, but like any other statement, only means something in context when proclaimed by a particular community. Consequently, there is no one unchanging idea contained in the word 'God'; instead, the word contains a whole spectrum of meanings, some of which are contradictory or mutually exclusive. Had the notion of God not had this flexibility, it would not have survived to become one of the great human ideas. When one conception of God has ceased to have meaning or relevance, it has been quietly disregarded and replaced by a new theology. Yet if we look at three religions, i.e., Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, it becomes clear that there is no objective view of God; each generation has to create the image of God that works for it. In this book, I have attempted to present world religions in a very broader context, vis-à-vis Islam. In the introduction, Islamic response to world religions has been shown in a comparative perspective. There is an article on the secular challenges that have rendered religious phenomenon vulnerable to all sorts of attacks. Thus, the book is a collection of valuable articles written by eminent scholars belonging to various religious denominations and researchers and teachers of Islamic studies. This book is also meant to cater
