

OVER HALF OF U.S. YOUNG ADULTS LIVE WITH THEIR PARENTS

For the first time in the last 120 years, the majority of young adults (age 18-29) are now living with their parents

Societal, cultural, and economic factors have influenced the rate at which people leave home.

Economic instability has disproportionately affected young workers and many college campuses remain closed.

The proportion of young adults living at home reached its low point in 1960 at the tail end of the baby boom.

Historically, white young adults were less likely to live with their parents, but that gap has now narrowed considerably.
