Natural Kinds and Genesis Stewart Umphrey,2016-08-22 In Natural Kinds and Genesis The Classification of Material Entities Stewart Umphrey raises and answers two questions What is it to be a natural kind And are there in fact any natural kinds First using the everyday understanding of things he argues that natural kinds may be understood as classes or as types and that the members or tokens of such kinds are individual continuants A continuant is essentially a being in becoming a material thing which changes and yet remains the same in virtue of its nature or essence as long as it exists In the primary sense of the term then a natural kind is a class whose members closely resemble one another substantially in virtue of their essences Alternatively it is a type whose tokens exemplify it in virtue of their essences To answer the second question one must make use of relevant scientific theories as well Umphrey agrees with scientific essentialists that there are natural kinds but he argues that most of the chemical physical and biological kinds posited in current theories are not natural kinds in the primary sense of the term The natural kinds realism he affirms is thus quite restricted it requires the existence of enduring things which closely resemble one another in virtue of their essences and such things exist apparently only if they have come into being or emerged in the course of symmetry breaking events Natural Kinds and Genesis will be of interest to philosophers of science and to those interested in the metaphysics of natural kinds and their members
