she broke cultural barriers and served as a literary role model for later generations of women authors. Rising from obscurity she came to the notice of Charles II who employed her as a spy in Antwerp. Upon her return to London and a probable brief stay in debtors prison she began writing for the stage. She belonged to a coterie of poets and famous libertines such as John Wilmot Lord Rochester. She wrote under the pastoral pseudonym Astrea. During the turbulent political times of the Exclusion Crisis she wrote an epilogue and prologue that brought her into legal trouble she thereafter devoted most of her writing to prose genres and translations. A staunch supporter of the Stuart line she declined an invitation from Bishop Burnet to write a welcoming poem to the new king William III. She died shortly after.
